Volunteers helping Ukrainian refugees settle in locally

By Lorne Stelmach

Volunteers are coming together to help bring people fleeing Ukraine to Canada.

The Ukraine to Morden initiative is a community-driven program that aims to help Ukrainian families with their wide array of immediate needs in making the adjustment to a new life.

"I'm so impressed ... people are saying how can we help ... it feels like our community is ready to help as much as possible," said Yevgeniya Tatarenko, who has been in the forefront of local efforts to support Ukraine during the Russian invasion.

"It's a lot to think about ... how to make it all work and how to organize dozens of people to help out," she said. "It's really incredible to see when each volunteer just knows what to do ... and it's making a huge difference in the lives of these families."

Tatarenko did not hesitate in getting involved after having spearheaded the local Help Ukraine - Morden and Pembina Valley group.

She is motivated to do whatever she can to help people from her homeland, and people by now know her as a local contact, so she gets a lot of inquiries.

"There are a lot of questions, but we had few answers for those people who were reaching out to us, so that's why we started to communicate and we started to plan what we could do," she explained.

"We needed to come up with a system to help displaced Ukrainians arriving to Morden ... a system that will work and help with everything."

It is a complex task, as there is such a wide array of day-to-day basic needs to be addressed with many people arriving here with little or no knowledge and preparation for such a change.

"There's a lot of questions to be answered ... and we're still developing it all as we see new requests come in," Tatarenko said. "Behind each part of the process, each of the actions, dozens of people are behind those processes."

For example, someone is coordinating getting groceries organized, while someone else is helping with advice and options for child care, and there is also someone with strong knowledge of Morden real estate to help find places for families to stay.

"It's really interesting to see how everyone wants to help and everyone wants to do something," Tatarenko said. "We're so thankful to all our volunteers in this community who've come together for us and for Ukrainian families. It is their wish to help."

The needs can be quite different from people arriving through the regular immigration program, as those may have more grasp of English and be better prepared, she noted.

"We do need to adapt; we do need to help with translation. We do need to help with understanding how everything works," Tatarenko said. "This situation is a little different. They need more help ... they are basically coming with one suitcase ... some of these people left the country very quickly."

Ukraine to Morden committee member and Morden immigration coordinator Shelly Voth agrees the needs in this instance are very different from the more formal immigration program.

"It is a lot of work, but it's a great group of people who are involved ... and I think we're doing a lot of learning on the fly," she said. "We've gotten a lot of great response from the community."

"Right now, our biggest need is going to be host families who are willing to do about a two-week stint with people when they first come," Voth explained. "It's until we are able to find them more permanent housing."

Immigrant survey reveals service gaps, integration challenges

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The results are in on the Pembina Valley Local Immigration Partnership's first large-scale Immigrant Survey.

PVLIP reached out to newcomers to our area earlier this year to find out where the service gaps and integration hurdles might be.

"One of the biggest things we were hoping for was to hear from immigrants and newcomers who aren't necessarily connected to settlement services," said coordinator Elaine Burton Saindon.

A total of 271 people fully completed the survey, providing an interesting glimpse into some of the challenges facing the Pembina Valley's newest residents.

Some issues were very much expected, including things like a lack of affordable housing and public transportation. Finding a family doctor was also identified as an area that could use some improvement.

These are issues that have been well-identified in our communities for some time now, Burton Saindon pointed out.

"Some things weren't a surprise, but it shows they're still impacting the newcomers that are coming to town."

While 86 per cent of survey respondents voiced satisfaction at the settlement services available in the region, there seemed to be a real disconnect between that number and the awareness of exactly what programs and services are being offered.

Many survey respondents expressed a desire to see more skills training and English classes for newcomers—things Regional Connections is already offering.

"There was a large number of people who seemed not to know anything about it," Burton Saindon said, noting it's a very clear indication that more work needs to be done to get the word out about these programs so more immigrants are able to access the full range of supports available to them.

She noted that creating an online information hub is one way this barrier could be overcome, as could including a detailed settlement services package for all newcomers when they arrive in rural Canada.

On the whole, survey respondents said they found the Pembina Valley to be pretty welcoming to newcomers, though some did share stories of discrimination.

Nearly 45 per cent of respondents felt they have been treated unfairly in their community due to their accent or language (26.9 per cent), race or skin colour (21.4 per cent), ethnicity or culture (21 per cent), or religious beliefs (17 per cent).

accepted there, some did note they feel like their career advancement has been hindered due to language barriers or racial discrimination.

"I think overall it shows us there is work to be done in the area of inclusion and maybe education for the greater community on how do we be more aware of the way that we make people feel? What are our unconscious biases?" Burton Saindon observed.

On the positive side, 84 per cent of respondents agree that they are welcome in their community, almost 76 per cent said they have a strong sense

Students lend Many Hands a helping hand

École Morden Middle School students worked together recently to help out those in need in the community.

The Grade 5-8 students were all in-involved in the school's food drive, and the classes in the end came up with quite a haul of food for Many Hands Resource Centre, which oversees the food bank program operating out of the 500 Stephen Street community centre.

"We loaded it all up and took it to Many Hands ... and we had collected about 1,800 non-perishable food items. We had the backs of three trucks completely full," said teacher

Tara Chewings, who also works with the school's student council. "I think they were really overwhelmed and happy with the amount of food that was brought in ... it was great."

Heavy rain causes overland flooding across the region

By Lorne Stelmach

A second major wintry springtime storm over the weekend wreaked havoc across the region.

Hwy. 32 in Winkler was closed Monday night due to a failed culvert and area residents were warned to prepare for potential evacuation if the dike failed, the City of Morden had to construct a temporary road access for residents cut off as a result of damage to the Alvey Street bridge, and roads all across the RM of Stanley were impassable thanks to the quickly rising waters.

"We were warned there would be overland flooding, but the rain and the previous week's snow, that combination, just really accelerated it all," said Stanley Deputy Reeve Ike Friesen. "There were well over a hundred locations where water was running over the roads, so we have a lot of roads that have had erosion as well as driveways that have been washed out."

"It's likely going to be an ongoing problem for a little while," Morden Mayor Brandon Burley said Monday with more rain in the forecast for this week. "The weather can be a split personality with the extremes of last summer and now this ... it's not been an easy year to manage."

Monday night at around 10 p.m., an emergency alert went out in Winkler warning residents that a drainage culvert had been compromised at Hwy. 32. Water was backing up west of the highway as a result and there were concerns over whether the south dike would hold.

Emergency crews were on the scene through the night pumping water and the need for evacuation was averted. Hwy. 32 remained closed at press time.

Closer to midnight, the city announced that Pembina Avenue just west of 15th St. at the cemetery was closed due to overland flooding. Residents were advised to avoid the area, as well as the area around the dike and 14th St. South.

"WE ARE NOT OUT OF IT YET"

Southern Emergency Response Committee (SERC) emergency co-ordinator Darin Driedger noted the fact the flooding is affecting so many areas at once has been a challenge to combat.

"There were so many areas where water was going over roadways," he said. "Stanley public works was really working very diligently over the entire weekend ... and I know there were some contractors delivering sand and supplies right through the night."

"Thankfully, things kind of started to stabilize as of Sunday afternoon ... but it's still a precarious situation ... so we caution people that we are not out of it yet."

SERC issued an update Sunday that there was hardly any area of the RM of Stanley not affected by overland flooding. Aside from well over 100 locations where water was running over roads, there were countless Homes with flooded basements in a number of areas.

The water in the western portion of the RM was receding later in the day Sunday, but the east was still receiving a tremendous amount of water, and SERC noted warmer temperatures in the next few days could easily lead to another peak in water flows, although the forecast was favourable for a slower melt.

Another concern was there is still enough of a snow pack up on the escarpment that is going to come east, but only the weather will decide how fast that comes, SERC added. In the meantime, it was coordinating volunteer response as well as arranging assistance with sandbagging.

"The challenge is managing it," added Driedger. "But it's always encouraging though to see people reaching out and wanting to help."

Friesen noted that Stanley council met Sunday at noon with staff to assess the situation and get updates. As of late Monday, they were seeing improvement in terms of water levels, and there had been about 20,000 sandbags distributed with close to 20 homes or buildings sandbagged.

"The water was receding, but we still had concern about an area north of Winkler," he noted. "The colder temperature was helping us ... but, of course, the next RM is having to deal with it."

"All of this of course just really accelerates hammering the roads. So people should be aware our roads are not in ideal condition. They will need to have patience. A lot of our guys were operating pumps and looking after the water, so we were not able to get on the roads to do a lot of repair there yet."

"I really give our guys credit," Friesen said. "Our public works and staff were just working so hard. They were working 24 hours there."

OVERWHELMED SEWERS

Meanwhile, both Winkler and Morden issued warnings that their sewer systems were overwhelmed due to the rains.

There was a request made to the public to minimize overall water usage to reduce the strain on the systems, but the main concern was sump pumps directing water into already overflowing sewers.

"The biggest message we want to get out is the sewer system simply cannot handle drain tiles going into the sewer," said Winkler Mayor Martin Harder. "We know there are lots where they are being pumped directly into the sewer, and the system cannot handle it."

He added it will take a little bit of

I Am Canadian

What does it mean to be Canadian?

The Canadian identity is something that has plagued Canada and Canadians ever since Confederation in 1867 (and likely before).

One of my Canadian literature classes at university spent a huge amount of time on the subject recommending books like The Mountain and the Valley by Earnest Buckler, The Fruits of the Earth by good ol' F.P. Grove, and many more.

By Peter Cantelon

There are many definitions of what it means to be Canadian. It could simply mean a person who lives in Canada, but this is unsatisfying.

It really depends a lot on who you are and where you are from.

A person in Toronto may give you a very different definition than a person from Chortitz, for instance. A person from Montreal will give you a different answer than a person from Toronto. A new immigrant from Pakistan or Ukraine will give you a different answer than a fifth generation Canadian living in Calgary or Vancouver just as BIPOC or LGBTQ+ Canadians will likely differ in their response from those who do not identify as such.

Sometimes it feels as if being Canadian simply means wondering what it means to be Canadian. If any country has an identity crisis it's us.

I used to think we were the polite people who were quick to apologize. We don't want to cause problems. We like to live under the radar. Canadians, I thought, were slow to anger and generally the friendliest people on earth—proud of our beer and coffee.

Sure, there may be some people from other parts of the planet who see us simply as maple syrup sucking snow dwellers, but of course we know there is much more to us than this.

We are the First Nations and we are the children of colonizers and immigrants.

Canadians are fond of the outdoors, we love BBQ, camping, and any mention of a Canadian anywhere else in the world.

If you are a Canadian and you have managed to become successful in Hollywood or as a musician it is almost certain we would elect you as Prime Minister if you ever chose to run (I'm talking to you, Ryan Reynolds).

I never thought of us as big flag wavers. We were never the LOOK AT HOW GREAT WE ARE!!! obnoxious types but perhaps that is changing given the number of torn up, dirty Canadian flags being inflicted on restaurants, trucks, and trailers lately. Suddenly everyone wants their Canadian neighbour to know they are Canadian.

What does it mean to be Canadian? It means something different to everyone ... but it also comes down to an average. Canada is the patchwork quilt we all learned about in elementary school. We're not a melting pot. We have not historically asked people to assimilate like some sort of Borg

Our mistake

Sometimes things can go a little wonky when the editor's away on holidays ...

The final paragraphs of Peter Cantelon's Pg. 6 column "Smoke on the Water" last week were cut off.

For those of you looking for that story turn in vain, we sincerely apologize!

If you missed the piece entirely, Cantelon went through some of the cons that come with allowing motorized vehicles on Lake Minnewasta, including polluting Morden's main source of drinking water with fuel.

Here is the proper end to that column (you can re-read the start of it in our archives online at www.winklermordenvoice.ca or on our Facebook page):

The good news is that one good thing that may have come out of the horrible drought we all just suffered through was a ban on motorized vehicles from the lake. Morden is now in the enviable position of simply not having to make a decision. This is a rare place for a politician to be.

Council can simply leave the status quo and have a much healthier lake that is easier to clean.

Of course I realize that we might lose some motorized boat tourism, but the question is how much tourism money is worth dumping a gallon of fuel (or even 2.5 ounces) an hour into your primary drinking water source?

of belonging here, and 73 per cent said they feel safe here.

"It's a big compliment that generally, yes, people feel welcomed, they feel safe, they feel like they can raise their families without fear here," Burton Saindon said. "I think that is a very positive message to take away from this."

PVLIP will use this feedback as it develops its action plan for the years ahead.

> FOOD DRIVE, FROM PG. 4

The students got actively involved in organizing and promoting the drive and the collection and sorting of the food from April 6-19, Chewings said.

"It was kind of a real life, hands-on math activity, which was really neat," she said. "We offered little incentive prize for the top class in each grade ... something like that kind of spurs them on, and there's the competition between classes ... a little healthy competition helps."

And after two years of being restricted in what they could do during the pandemic, the food drive was a great way to get back to doing some good in the community, Chewings said.

"Especially over the last two years, we haven't been able to do as much. So now that we can do this sort of thing again and be more involved ... we were limited for awhile. We couldn't even get together in our school with other classes.

"We also just recognize that there is a need in our community. We knew that Many Hands gives out about 60 hampers a week to families in need, nation into a boring, homogenous people.

We are a country that has said "bring your culture, language and tradition here and let us celebrate your distinctiveness with you." We are a nation of Little Italies, Indias, Greek Towns and more. We are a culture rampant with multicultural festivals. Canada is everyone and everywhere and, like a many-threaded rope, we are incred-done to this level in the region. So even though it's not perfect ... it is a good baseline to go forward," said Burton Saindon. "It will build some of our content that we're looking for as we work on our Welcoming and Inclusive Communities Toolkit as well as ongoing needs for resources in the area."

PVLIP intends to post the full survey online at www.pvlip.ca. You can also find their action plan and other resources there.

and of course some of those are our own families. The students all felt pretty good about all of the food that came in."

"It's amazing to see kids getting involved with this issue, and it really touches my heart," said Tracey Krause, program co-ordinator for Many Hands Resource Centre.

"Over the last two weeks, actually, kids have actually been incredibly generous toward the food bank," she added, noting there was also support from a local under 15 hockey team as well as the St. Pauls United Church Sunday School.

"I was so surprised when they showed up with the three truckloads," said Krause of hhte ÉMMS contribution, noting they are overall getting a lot of support from the community for the food bank program.

"There's everything from those small amounts to the larger amounts ... and we are able to give out decent hampers to the families even with the increased usage."

ibly strong.

Why write about this now in April? Why not save it for Canada Day and July 1st weekend? I don't know ... maybe our identity crisis has heightened a little bit over the past two years of bickering and outright fighting.

Maybe we need to be reminded that we live in the friendliest part of the friendliest province in the friendliest nation on earth.

time for the system to fully recover, and of course it also depends on what the weather does in the days ahead.

"The roads in the RM were certainly taking a hammering, but even here in the city, you take a look at the number of potholes that have never been there before, and they keep showing up," Harder said. "So people are going to need to have a little patience."

"This time of year, there's always concern with the amount of ground moisture involved that not only is our lagoon taking on a lot of water just because of snowfall and rain but our wastewater network itself is under stress," said Burley on how Morden's system is faring through all this.

"Based on our monitoring, there's clearly a substantial number of homes that aren't being diverted outdoors," he said. "The household loads right now that are going into the wastewater system need to be reduced as well ... and if people can conserve water and what goes down drains, that will help us as well."

Meanwhile, Morden also had to deal with the Alvey Street bridge getting damaged and leaving some residents cut off as a result of losing their only road access.

The city was having an engineering assessment done, but in the meantime they were able to construct a temporary road over the railway tracks thanks to Sawatzky's Furniture allowing the use of their parking lot for access and CP Rail also giving its approval.

"That will be the access until we can get that bridge rebuilt or replaced ... it will be local traffic only," said Burley. "This was a pretty quick fix, relatively speaking, from the time the bridge washed out to the time we were able to get this road open ... within roughly a half day."

The Alvey and Parkhill bridges have been particular points of concern, and it is an issue that the city needs to address, Burley acknowledged.

"We have to look at all of our bridges. We need to do some work on our bridges. The one on Parkhill was on our radar already ... this isn't just a one-off; we can get this sort of flooding every so often.

"We'll have to look at whether we can continue to rely on this method of using culverts as a bridge rather than building proper bridges."

Winkler Community Foundation enjoys steady growth

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Winkler Community Foundation (WCF) board of directors gathered for their annual general meeting last week to reflect on the many successes of the past year.

The foundation experienced steady growth in 2021, with its various endowment funds growing by 11.7 per cent from $5 million to over $5.5 million.

That growth was due in part to donations totalling $255,089 as well as a 10.6 per cent return on investments.

“One of the big focuses that we’ve had over the past year and will have over the next number of years is to grow our Community Fund to $1 million by 2025. And we’re getting closer all the time,” said board president Corey Hildebrand, who takes over in the role from Scott Doell (Doell remains on the board as vice-president).

Last year saw that fund grow by nearly $168,000 to reach $871,155, putting them a stone’s throw from their goal.

“We’re more than on track for 2025, which is great,” Hildebrand said. “We only have about $130,000 left to raise and we’ll be at a million dollars.

“Despite COVID and everything that’s resulted from it, our community’s just been so generous and we have felt that very strongly as a foundation.”

FILE PHOTO

The Winkler Community Foundation board met recently to review the success and challenges of the past year.

The interest from WCF’s other endowment funds generate grants each year for specific organizations and projects in the community. They include funds for Katie Cares, Fire Rescue, Gateway Resources, the Winkler Cheer Board, Winkler Minor Ball (a new fund created this past year), among many others.

The Community Fund, meanwhile, is the foundation’s unrestricted fund, from which grants can be issued to support a broad range of projects—everything from arts and culture to recreation to social services.

Getting that fund to $1 million is going to expand WCF’s capacity for giving significantly.

“It will allow us to meet the needs of so many more worthwhile local organizations in their requests for funds,” Hildebrand said. “We get so many requests from such incredible organizations, but we have a small pool of money to play with for granting. So that million dollars just really increases how much we’re able to give back every year.”

When it comes to giving back, the foundation granted a total of $165,731 in 2021. That includes $81,420 from the Gordon Wiebe Scholarship Fund and $22,184 from the Community Fund.

They were also able to help other community organizations give back, Hildebrand noted, pointing to the nearly $186,000 that flowed through the foundation on behalf of Mend the Gap and the Falk Fehr Foundation.

Looking ahead, the foundation is preparing to launch its third Vital Signs report in 2023. The community survey was first organized by WCF in 2013 and then again in 2018.

It’s meant to be a sort of community checkup, Hildebrand explained, to see how the community is faring in terms of factors such as demographics, economics, and societal needs.

“It’s important for us to take the pulse of our community,” he said, “and I think that the foundation is in a really good position to have some real and honest conversations with residents of Winkler and then be able to distribute that information in an unbiased way.”

Previous Vital Signs reports have gone a long way towards identifying the needs of the community and getting programs and projects going to try to fill some of those gaps.

“There were a number of really positive initiatives that came out as a direct results of our last Vital Signs campaign and some of the vital conversations we were having afterwards,” Hildebrand said. “It really served as a bit of a catalyst ... and that’s something that we would love to repeat.”

Citizen of the Year Award to return in 2023

The Winkler Community Foundation has decided to push back the return of the Citizen of the Year Award to 2023

It marks the third year the award has been cancelled due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic.

President Corey Hildebrand said it was a difficult decision, but one they felt necessary on a number of fronts.

“We felt like maybe now was a really good time to sit back and reevaluate exactly how the nomination process works and what it looks like and we felt like we needed a little bit more time to do that,” he said, noting the depth of the nomination form has scared a few potential nominators off in the past. They plan to work on streamlining that for next year.

“We also felt that maybe people weren’t 100 per cent ready for that traditional awards banquet just yet,” Hildebrand noted. “We wanted to give a little bit more time and a little bit more space in order to make sure that we’re able to do this as best as we possible can.

“We’re very excited to resume it again in 2023.”

Nominations open May 2 for P.W. Enns Business Awards

Winkler chamber awards gala to make its return this fall

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Winkler and District Chamber of Commerce is celebrating its milestone 100th anniversary in 2022 with the return of the P.W. Enns Business Awards.

The chamber is aiming for early October for the awards gala, which was cancelled the past two years due to the pandemic.

A guest speaker has not yet been booked but the hunt is well underway, says executive director Tanya Chateaufeuf.

“We’re looking at having a big name speaker again, and it is our 100th year so we’re also looking to add some new elements to the gala to celebrate.”

But even as the chamber takes some time to look back on a century of work on behalf of the business community, the gala will be very much focused on the winners of the five awards up for grabs: the P.W. Enns Business Excellence Award, P.W. Enns Community Builder Award, P.W. Enns Business Builder Award, P.W. Enns Customer Service Award, and the P.W. Enns Not for Profit Service Award.

Nominations for these awards will be accepted May 2 to June 17.

Anyone in the community can nominate a business or non-profit organization, Chateaufeuf stresses.

“The nomination process is very, very simple. It really takes just a few minutes to fill out.”

All a nominator needs to do is provide a few sentences about why they feel the business deserves the award and then the chamber will round up any other needed details to complete

Cutting the ribbon on Venture Parts and Supply

Their new business very much seems to be an ideal fit for co-owners James Friesen and Abe Siemens.

The duo, who both grew up in rural Manitoba and have an agricultural background, see Venture Parts and Supply as filling a void in the Morden area.

"We've both worked in other retail areas, and we saw a need for this here, so that's what got us interested in starting this up," Friesen said Saturday as they held the official opening. "We both like to work with people, and we wanted to be involved in the agriculture sector in some way ... so it's about being able to help farmers and the ag industry.

"We've both seen that there is a need for this here ... and it's important to keep business in the community," he added. "What we have here, people have had to drive outside of our community to get this stuff. People want to stay in the community, if they don't have to drive somewhere else to get something. And it can help grow the community here as well."

Venture Parts and Supply offers a wide array of products for everything from smaller to larger equipment, and while it is largely geared towards the agriculture community it is certainly not limited to that sector.

"Hardware is a big one for us ... and water pumps, pressure washers and things like that are also something we do," said Friesen, who added they also offer various maintenance sup-

He sees their location in the Morden industrial park as being ideally suited for them.

"The reason we picked this location is it was in an industrial community here, and it's easy access for ag equipment and heavy trucks to come in and out," he said. "We're hoping it will be good for everyone ... it's easy access for the people we will serve."

the application for the selection committee.

"And people can send in multiple nominations if they like," Chateaufeuf says. "You don't have to just nominate one business."

The awards are an opportunity to really showcase businesses and organizations that are growing and thriving in Winkler.

"Focusing on the positive things in the community—the positive business growth, the great customer service, and the wonderful stories behind it all—is more important now than ever, I think," says Chateaufeuf. "It's time to get back into the mode of celebrating our accomplishments again and being proud of what we've been able to do as a community."

The gala will be held at the Meridian Exhibition Centre, giving the chamber more room than ever to play with.

"It will really open things up and allow for more people to attend," Chateaufeuf says. "We're so thrilled to be planning this for an in-person event again. We're going to pick up right where we left off ... and go bigger and better than ever."

Canadian chess great called Altona home

By Ty Dilello

A relatively unknown Altona carpenter was one of the all-time great Canadian chess minds.

Jacob Funk is best known for perfecting the technique of the chess problem where White is challenged to force checkmate in either two, three, or more moves. Such problems are popular around the world, and are considered mini works of art.

Born on April 20, 1889, Funk and his brothers (Peter, John, and Henry) would come to Altona from the Hochstadt area in 1939.

Funk was something of a genius from a young age, teaching himself algebra, geometry, and trigonometry. He won so many math contests that a number of sponsoring groups barred him from re-entering in order to give other competitors a chance at the prizes.

It was chess that became Funk's favourite strategy game. He was a member of numerous chess clubs worldwide.

"Personally, I always enjoyed a brain challenger," Funk said in a 1960s issue of the Red River Valley Echo. "So my preferred hobby has been the Advanced Mathematical Circle, a group from the States, to which I belonged for a number of years and quit only because of the paper shortage during World War I.

"I well remember how I spent many a winter evening sitting over these tough problems exchanged in the Circle. We not only solved mathematical problems but also had to find the best solutions and shortcuts to the answers."

Funk's first published problem was in the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times in 1918. He continued to compose and submit his problems for publication to magazines and newspapers around the world for more than 40 years.

He was also a member of the British Chess Problem Society for four decades before retiring in 1963.

Funk and two of his brothers took up carpentry in their adult years and built many of the houses in Altona between the 1930s and 1950s. It is said that their measurements were so meticulous that they could start building a house at opposite corners and meet perfectly in the middle without consulting one another.

Though having a reputation as master builders, they worked only long enough each year to earn $1,000. This allowed Funk and his brothers more time to pursue their other interests in music, mathematical problem solving, chess, and devising puzzles.

Funk also got paid to design crossword puzzles for magazines for a number of years and used some of that money to purchase Altona's first television set.

Towards the end of his life, he made a hand-made, hand-printed book featuring many of his original chess problem compositions. He donated the book and some others to the W.C. Miller Collegiate library before passing away in 1967 at the age of 78.

Today, Funk's chess problems and solutions from nearly a century ago are still celebrated and get brought up by grandmasters and chess historians alike.

Multiple cases of avian flu confirmed in Manitoba

By Ashleigh Viveiros

Avian influenza has officially arrived in Manitoba, with samples from a snow goose near Waskada and a bald eagle in the Dauphin area testing positive for the illness last week and a case confirmed in a commercial poultry flock on Sunday.

All three birds tested positive for the highly pathogenic avian influenza subtype known as H5N1. Poultry and water fowl are most susceptible for contracting the virus.

Manitoba Chief Veterinary Officer Dr. Scott Zaari stressed at a media briefing last Wednesday that the risk of avian flu to human health is low.

"There are no known cases of transmission of this strain of the virus from birds to humans in North America," he said, adding this strain of the flu does not pose a food safety risk.

"Manitoba poultry and eggs are safe to eat, when proper handling and of course cooking takes place."

Zaari expressed confidence in the province's protections at the commercial poultry farm level, which includes samples being sent regularly to the provincial lab for testing and precautions when it come to farm visitors.

"Really it's a matter of maintaining our existing structure and following the biosecurity protocols that our producers already have in place," he said.

Small flock or hobby farm owners are being advised to take precautions as well, as birds in such settings often have access to outdoor pens or are free range, putting them at greater risk for coming in contact with wild birds carrying the virus.

If possible, small flock owners are encouraged to confine their birds indoors during this high-risk period of wild bird migration, the province has said. Small flock owners can also submit samples through their vet for testing at the provincial lab at no cost.

Zaari noted there are currently no plans to issue any regulatory orders on this matter.

It's expected more cases of avian flu will be identified and reported in bird samples throughout the summer.

"This is an evolving situation," noted Maria Arlt, acting director of the Fish and Wildlife branch of Manitoba Agriculture. "Manitoba is constantly monitoring the latest guidance and advice from our partners and we will be adjusting accordingly.

"It is important to note that the overall impact of avian influenza on the wild bird population is expected to be low."

Monitoring wide-ranging wild bird populations across Manitoba is a challenge, Arlt said, which is why the province is asking the public for their help.

Manitobans are asked to contact the toll-free TIP Line at 1-800-782-0076 if they find any of the following:

- clusters of six or more dead wild waterfowl (e.g., ducks, geese) or other water birds;
- any number of dead raptors or avian scavengers (e.g., ravens, crows, gulls); or
- large groups of dead birds, such as more than 20 of any species.

While the transmission risk to humans is low, people should not touch any dead birds or other wildlife they come across with their bare hands.

If you have to handle a dead bird,

2021 tourism awards handed out to local groups

Explore Morden Winkler, PVLIP honoured

By Lorne Stelmach

Two local initiatives were honoured as part of the annual awards of the Central Manitoba Tourism agency.

The honours for 2021 were only just recently handed out after being delayed amidst the pandemic.

Among the recipients were Explore Morden Winkler with the Marketing Excellence Award for its themed food weeks, while Pembina Valley Local Immigration Partnership (PVLIP) won the Event of the Year with a budget under $5,000 for its Connecting Cultures and Communities celebration.

The Explore Morden Winkler food weeks were cited for showcasing local restaurants and to rally the community in support of food, small business and creativity.

"We don't do these things for recognition or getting awards," executive director Shane Neufeld said of their poutine, pizza, burger, and appetizer weeks. "It's just something we felt we needed to do for our struggling restaurant businesses during COVID."

"We had seen what these food weeks were doing for other regions, so we thought let's put that in place here for us," he said. "Poutine absolutely has been our biggest one ... but they all have been great. We've gotten to a point where they know exactly what we want from them."

PVLIP was cited for the multicultural celebration that was hosted virtually due to the pandemic.

"It was very humbling to be recognized by your community in this way," said co-ordinator Elaine Burton Saindon.

"For us, it's nice because it shows that people do see what we're doing and recognize the efforts we're trying to make in our region," she said. "It's rewarding in the sense that people have noticed the work that we do, which is primarily behind the scenes. So when we do this kind of community engagement like with this event, it's nice to know that it was appreciated."

"Our hope is that people may embrace the idea that okay, what can I do in my community to be more proactive in being welcoming and inclusive to others."

Among the other honourees was Tracy Enns with the Volunteer of the Year Award for her work with Boyne River Keepers, Syl's Drive-in in Carman with the Award of Distinction Business Award, Tyler King with an individual Award of Distinction for his work with Carman-Dufferin economic development, Portage Junkyard Dogs with the Innovation Award, and Event of the Year to the RM of Victoria for its New Year's Eve celebrations.

Thunder alumni basketball game is on this Friday

By Voice staff

Morden Collegiate's gym will be filled with the roar of Thunder this Friday as current and former students battle it out in the annual alumni basketball game.

The high school is inviting the entire community to come cheer on the MCI varsity girls and boys teams as they face their predecessors in the event's post-pandemic return.

"This is always such a great community event for our school and our alumni," says vice-principal Tania Sigurdson. "I have seen alumni bringing their spouses and children to watch them play in their old school. It is really special to see our graduates from various years return to the court."

"We are very excited to open our doors and celebrate our Morden Thunder athletes both present and past."

Varsity boys basketball coach Ashley Hoitink hopes to see a lot of familiar faces both on the court and in the stands.

"I am excited to see our alumni being welcomed back to the gym they played many hours in," she said. "I am hoping this is also a welcome back to our community as we open our gym up to the public again."

The action starts at 6 p.m. on Friday, April 29 with the women's game followed by the men's match at 7:30 p.m.

Province unveils its new plans for education reform

By Lorne Stelmach

The province hit the reset button last week on education reform with a new strategy that leaves out at least one key controversial piece that led to the government scrapping its previous proposal.

The new Manitoba K to 12 Education Action Plan is in response to 75 recommendations from the Manitoba Commission on Kindergarten to Grade 12 Education.

It's the sequel to Bill 64, which was otherwise known as the Education Modernization Act—a widely unpopular piece of legislation that among other things aimed to replace school divisions with a centralized education authority run by government appointees.

The new plan puts aside the plan to consolidate the province's public school boards into six to eight regional boards consisting of five to seven trustees, the majority of whom would have been appointed.

"We heard loud and clear from Manitobans that they didn't want us to change the governance structure," Education Minister Wayne Ewasko said in announcing the new plan that will be implemented over the next five years.

He touted the strategy as "a vision where all Manitoba students succeed no matter where they live, their backgrounds or their individual circumstances.

"All children deserve a high-quality education, and our government is committed to strengthening and improving education in the province," said Ewasko. "This action plan redefines our focus on actions that improve educational outcomes with student achievement and well-being at the centre of all planning and decisions.

The action plan is focused on ensuring access to high-quality, equitable education, preparing students for their future, supporting excellence in teaching and leadership and strengthening the public education system.

As part of the strategy, an education council will be established to provide strategic guidance and advice on the implementation of the action plan, which has four pillars for student success:

- High quality learning - to improve learning and outcomes for students through responsive and relevant curriculum and learning experiences in safe and inclusive learning environments.

- Student engagement and well-being

- to respond to diverse life experiences, engage students, promote well-being, support successful transitions and leverage partnerships.

- Excellence in teaching and leadership - to ensure teachers, school staff and leaders have the knowledge, skills and tools to support student achievement and well-being.

- Responsive systems - to ensure an equitable, aligned and effective public education system that focuses on engagement, inclusion and planning for provincial and local needs.

"Despite everyone's best efforts, there continues to be inequities in our education system," said Ewasko. "There's work to be done to advance truth and reconciliation, to ensure personal and social circumstances aren't a barrier to education and to create safe, welcoming and respectful

Breaking down the action plan

The provincial government's new action plan on education reform released last week is built around four key pillars.

While perhaps short on specifics in some places, the plan does cover a lot of ground, so here is a selection of some highlights including measures already underway or in the plans:

High-quality learning

- Implement Indigenous Education Policy Framework in partnership with the Indigenous Inclusion Directorate Advisory Council.

- Establishment of a curriculum advisory panel.
- Establish a minister's advisory council on inclusive education.

- Strengthen Français and French Immersion curriculum policy.

- Implement a curriculum renewal process with an initial focus on physical education, health education and science.

- Shift the provincial assessment program to include Manitoba curriculum-based assessments in early years, middle years, and Grade 10.

- Update the provincial report card to ensure it is inclusive for all learners.

- Introduce consistent early years assessments, focusing on children entering Kindergarten and students who have experienced disrupted learning.

Student engagement

- Establish a student advisory council to provide advice and perspectives to the minister.

- Launch an elder and knowledge keeper in schools initiative in 33 schools across Manitoba, with the program expanding in the 2022/23.

- Establish a poverty and education task force to remove barriers to participation and engagement in learning.

- Launch a mental health in schools strategy.
- Develop a provincial remote learning strategy including an online high school to enhance access to programming across the province

- Undertake a needs assessment and program review for technical vocational learning.

- Develop a strategic plan to enhance access to adult education.

- Explore approaches to expand access to the arts, including music, visual arts, dance, drama and other value-added community activities.

Excellence in teaching and leadership

- Consult on options for a regulatory body to guide teacher practice and certification.

- Create a workforce planning framework focused on recruitment/retention of school staff in rural and northern communities and increasing French, Indigenous and Indigenous language educators.

- Assess and plan for professional learning needs including the exploration of a provincial consortium model

- Ensure every principal takes concrete actions to improve the achievement of Indigenous students and includes improvements as part of their annual school plans.

- Explore options for preparation and deployment of literacy and numeracy coaches.

- Review requirements and processes to streamline certification for internationally educated teachers.

Responsive systems

- Launch a review of the education funding model.

- Measure system-wide progress towards the achievement of the truth and reconciliation calls to action.

- Launch an education council with representatives from the education system, youth-serving organizations and partners to support provincial planning and alignment across divisions and schools.

- Develop a provincial data and performance measurement strategy that will measure and report on all students' achievement and wellbeing at the provincial, school division and school levels.

- Launch a provincial survey for students, parents, staff and leaders to inform provincial, divisional and school-level plans and broader decision making.

- Clearly define the roles and responsibilities of those responsible for an effective, efficient and accountable public education system and develop a strategy to assess effectiveness.

- Build and promote a user-friendly public platform with access to information, data and policies about the public education system.

- Explore shared-services opportunities to promote equitable access to programming, learning supports and information technology systems and to enhance efficiencies within the K to 12 system.

- Consult on strategies to enhance school, family and community partnerships and engagement.

MCA's virtual choir returns for Music Monday

By Ty Dilello

The Manitoba Choral Association (MCA) will be releasing a video performance of their virtual choir this year on May 2.

Riding on the success of last year's virtual choir project, MCA once again invited singers of all abilities, ages ten and up, to come together virtually in the spirit of Provincial Honour Choirs, which needed to be cancelled again for 2022 due to pandemic restrictions.

This year the choir's director was Dr. Jamie Hillman from the University of Toronto for the piece "Wide Open Spaces" by Canadian composer Sarah Quartel.

The project ran for six weeks from February to March. A PDF score, learning tracks, and rehearsal notes were made available to participants, and live online rehearsals took place over two weekends so the singers could engage with the conductor. New for this year, participants had the opportunity to attend a live virtual Q&A session with the composer.

Like other virtual choir projects choirs have produced during the pandemic, singers recorded themselves singing their voice part at home.

"Once MCA received all of the individual recordings, we worked with a technician to put everything together," said Jenny Steinke-Magnus, executive director of the Manitoba Choral Association. "We had 100 singers from across the province, including some from as far away as the Maritimes and the USA, take part in this year's project. It was very exciting to still see so much interest in this type of program, even though choirs have slowly started to resume singing in person again."

learning environments..

"We need to undertake this work in a co-ordinated, systematic way to better support young Manitobans and to ensure all children can receive a high quality education," he continued. "By working together, we can realize our vision where all Manitoba students succeed, no matter where they live, their backgrounds or their individual circumstances."

The minister emphasized an open and collaborative approach moving forward with the plan, which he added can continue to evolve.

"There are going to be some things that we're going to learn throughout this whole process," said Ewasko, who noted the lessons learned during the pandemic also means they are "trying to make sure that we're nimble and flexible to be able to provide those different learning opportunities for our students ... I think, moving forward, we learnt a lot from the pandemic."

"LOTS OF POSITIVE HOPE"

Stephen Ross, superintendent of Western School Division, in general liked much of what he initially saw in the plan with its more reasonable objectives and realistic timelines.

"I think there's lots of positive hope that we are heading in the right direction to continue to focus on making things better for kids in schools," he suggested. "Since Bill 64 disappeared, there has been a lot of work on a number of things listed in this as action items."

"I think school divisions will feel that they've been heard," he said. "Clearly, we can do more, and we always want to do better. I think it's good to have some targets and some things to work on that are connected together, and that's one of the things that we see in this action plan ... they've made the effort to make sure they are connecting these things together and that they are not all operating as isolated silos."

Janice Krahn, interim superintendent of Garden Valley School Division, could not be reached for comment.

Manitoba NDP leader Wab Kinew saw very little of what he was looking for in the plan.

"We know parents and educators want smaller class sizes, more learning supports for their kids to help them recover from the pandemic and more community involvement in their schools," he said. "Premier Stefanson had the chance to meet the needs of students, but she chose to stick with Pallister's failed road map instead."

"We know there are fewer teachers working in Manitoba classrooms this year because of PC cuts, and unfortunately, under Premier Stefanson, nothing has changed."

A representative of the Manitoba Teacher Society suggested the plan does represent a distinct and welcome departure in tone and focus and is perhaps better rooted in the heart of the K-12 commission recommendations.

"It's gratifying to see that the extensive consultation undertaken by the commission is finally reflected in the government's planning," said president James Bedford. "It's clear that MTS, along with other education stakeholders and indeed thousands of private citizens committed to public education have been heard."

"We are cautiously optimistic today, however we will continue to speak out in the interests of teachers and an effective, inclusive and appropriately funded public education system for all Manitoba students."

wear gloves, Arlt urged. Protective eyewear and masks are also advised as additional precautions, and hands should be cleaned thoroughly afterwards.

When it comes to backyard bird feeders and baths, the province is not currently recommending people put them away.

"If you have a property without domestic poultry, backyard bird feeders are okay as long as they're regularly cleaned and sanitized," Arlt said.

Artist shares his awakening as a LGBTQ+ artist

By Lorne Stelmach

His artistic explorations have seen Tye Dandridge-Evancio venture into a number of styles, but one key part of the journey was fully embracing his identity.

The programs and outreach co-ordinator for the Pembina Hills Arts Council touched on that as part of his recent Third Thursday art talk where he emphasized the need for society to continue to embrace diversity.

It wasn't always easy for Dandridge-Evancio, who described himself as "a queer, sometimes male artist creating images and stories as a means of administering a much-needed dose of queerness into mainstream society."

"My studio practice is the result of growing up in a largely conservative society with very few LGBTQ role models," he explained.

"With my Masters studies, I kind of view it as my awakening as a queer artist. I realized I could be making art about being queer," he said. "I was struggling with my Masters degree until I was told ... I had been kind of been toying with the idea of making queer art ... then finally one of my supervisors told me you can make art and be gay ... I don't why, it was just one of those weird things that it didn't occur to me."

Even to this day, there's still some of that stigma to be overcome, but it was even more so for Dandridge-Evancio "having grown up as a youth in a smaller town.

"In sex education, I think there was one small mention of being gay, and it was met with laughter," he said. "And if there was anyone in the media I could look up to or any role models even in the community, I didn't see them."

Artist Ty Dandridge-Evancio emphasized the need for society to continue to embrace diversity in his talk at the Pembina Hills Arts Council last week.

Some of his experiences have helped him embrace the role he could play, such as serving as a curator in Wasagaming.

"I wanted each of the artists to have a best shot at showing their work to the public .. for a lot

Uncover your roots

By Ashleigh Viveiros

A local woman's desire to learn more about her family history has spun off into a new business.

Dusty van der Steen, who grew up on a farm near Morden-Winkler and today calls the Elm Creek area home, has spent the last few years filling out the branches of her family tree.

"Growing up I knew that my father's side were Mennonites," van der Steen shares. "One of my great aunts was kind of the family genealogist and so for the most part for my father's side there were genealogy records ... I kind of knew where everybody came from.

"But on my mom's side we knew absolutely nothing other than just family stories."

Inspired by the detailed genealogical records she had for her dad's side, van der Steen began diving into a research project that has taken years but continues to yield results.

"It turns out my mom's side is a mix of English, German, German-Jewish, Irish, and Scottish," she says, noting she also dug up some interesting stories about her ancestors, including one who fought in the American Civil War and another who ran a bakery in a village in England.

"It's quite extensive what I've been able to uncover and it's just been such a great experience learning to do it for myself," van der Steen says, explaining she's made use of online databases, newspaper archives, and historical society archives in multiple countries.

"There's multitudes of places to look for information. It can take a lot of digging around ... a lot of searching."

Proper genealogical standards also call for more than one supporting document, which can make it an even greater challenge to confirm details you find the further back you go.

"It can be kind of a game of cat and mouse sometimes and trying to be creative in thinking where you might be able to find the right information," van der Steen says. "Some countries have a lot of records ... others not so much and it can be a bit more difficult to find anything."

But the thrill of the hunt has kept her going and her knack for this work led her to take on projects for a few extended family members.

"I really enjoy the challenge of it all ... it kind of just came to a point where I thought why don't I start doing this as a side business? And here we are."

Van der Steen recently launched Rural Roots Genealogy, offering to help people track down the names and stories that make up their own family histories.

Hog manure: fertilizer close to home

Over the last two years, the ability to ship and receive essential goods across stretched supply chains has been compromised. More recently, there was sudden concern for prairie crop farmers as to if and when they would receive fertilizer needed for the spring planting season. Imported and non-renewable fertilizers must be shipped in by rail or truck, which in today's marketplace, adds to already high production costs.

Hog manure is a valuable organic fertilizer that has been used by farmers for over 10,000 years to help build and maintain soil health. Using manure as fertilizer helps recycle key nutrients, creating healthier soils and better crops. The use of manure is highly regulated. Hog farmers work with professional agrologists who assist them in making informed decisions regarding their environmental impacts.

With the price of synthetic fertilizers forecasted to skyrocket due to the war in Ukraine, using locally available, natural fertilizers like hog manure makes good economic — and environmental — sense.

Clay Owl officially opens its new nest this week

By Ashleigh Viveiros

Clay Owl Studio & Boutique has made a new nest for itself.

The paint-it-yourself pottery shop marks the grand opening of its new space at 586 Main St. this Wednesday, April 27 with a day of free cookies, hourly gift card draw prizes, and a ribbon cutting.

Gateway Resources, which works with people with intellectual disabilities in our community, has run Clay Owl out of a tiny storefront on Mountain Ave. for the past four years.

The business gives Gateway participants the chance to develop and improve their job skills, working alongside a job coach.

It's been an invaluable asset, says CEO Kim Nelson.

"The social enterprise has been an amazing opportunity for Gateway Resources. It has given lots of opportunities for the individuals that we support," she said last week as Clay Owl staff worked to put the finishing touches on a space nearly twice as large as the old location.

"By moving to a larger space it enables us to offer additional boutique items, offer additional space for people to come enjoy the services we offer," Nelson said, noting they've had about 10 Gateway participants working at Clay Owl over the past few years; this new facility has the capacity for many more. "Having this space will allow us to really grow this program.

"We have so many valued and dedicated employees at Gateway who just need a little bit more job skills and could be valued employees at many local businesses," she added. "This just gives them the training and experience they need to get there."

In addition to a small boutique area offering a host of gift items and locally-made artwork, the space also has dozens of shelves packed full of clay creations of all sizes and price points for customers to paint, numerous painting tables with lots more breathing room around them than before, a kiln in the back that finishes off customers' pieces with about a week's turnaround time, and a separate room for birthday parties.

"We actually have space now for cake and presents and things—our old space was too tight," said manager Arienne Morissette.

The facility also has a separate room for the washers and dryers Gateway uses to fulfil its laundry contracts in the community, Nelson added.

Morissette reminds potential customers that an art background is most certainly not needed to have fun at Clay Owl.

"Our staff are glad to help with different painting tips, tricks, and techniques," she said.

One of those staffers is Chelsey Bugden, whose tasks at the studio include cleaning up the paint supplies, wiping down the tables, and answering the phone.

"HAVING THIS SPACE WILL ALLOW US TO REALLY GROW THIS PROGRAM."

"It gets me out of the house," she said, noting she's a friendly person who enjoys chatting with people and making sure they're having a good time as they paint.

Community built hand in hand

Common mission found in the Winkler MCC Thrift Shop

By Nikki Hamm Gwala,
MCC Manitoba

If you found yourself at the Winkler MCC Thrift Shop on a Monday morning, you might be impressed by the industrious pace of volunteers sorting household donations, pricing new stock, repairing sewing machines, or refreshing shop displays.

You might find yourself following aromas of home baking and freshly brewed coffee into a brightly lit staff room, where you'd hear a combination of Low German, High German and English. Maybe even a few phrases in Spanish or Russian.

Mostly though, you would be drawn in by the laughter shared between a hearty group of Winkler area residents, who realized a common mission in their local Mennonite Central Committee (MCC) Thrift shop.

The Winkler store was founded in 1974 and quickly became a hub in the growing community. Moving four times within the shop's first 12 years and expanding its current location four times since then, the shop has contributed more than $12 million to the global relief, development and peace work of MCC since its establishment.

When the shop opened, Winkler and the surrounding area made up a close-knit rural Mennonite community. But, over the past two decades, the Winkler area has seen steady growth in its diversity and numbers.

Today, the Winkler MCC Thrift Shop operates with a generous pool of 300 volunteers and serves approximately 1,200 customers a week. As a community hub, it's bridge-building for people of varying church affiliations, ages, abilities, ethnic and socio-economic backgrounds.

So, why does the shop have such a large volunteer pool?

When Eduard Richter began his role as assistant manager two years ago, he was surprised to find that more than 10 area churches—across denominational lines—supplied a ready stream of volunteers to operate the shop. There aren't many places where local churches, with varying affiliations come together, but Richter says that at the shop "we [all have] the same purpose."

Peter Kornelson, the shop's manager, says that the volunteers inspire his work.

"They say Freedom 55 and you're supposed to retire and kick back and do nothing. When I look at the people we have here, that's just not so. You need a purpose to get up in the morning, and that encourages me."

Volunteers come through the thrift shop's doors for varying reasons. For many it offers vocational purpose. For others it offers a welcoming and safe space to connect during isolating times. And for the newcomer, it's a place to learn English, gain work ex-

Jakob Hildebrandt has a long-standing history with MCC and continues to repair the Winkler shop's small equipment and appliance donations at the age of 93 perience and make new friends.

For Heather Dyck, the shop offers a flexible vocation when chronic illness otherwise limits her options.

"[Volunteering] is one of my favourite things that I do ... I really like being able to do something that is productive and feels useful and working for an [organization] that is doing good things," says Dyck.

At 93, Jakob Hildebrandt continues his 25-year-long volunteer commitment for a handful of reasons.

Since the mid-1990s, he has repaired computers, small appliances, bicycles and his specialty, antique sewing machines.

For Hildebrandt, values of recycling, reusing and reclaiming used goods were ingrained at a young age.

"When you see an item coming in that probably would go to the dump or scrap heap and you're able to make something out of it, [it] gives you satisfaction that you were able to make something," he says.

His commitment to MCC runs deep. As refugees in southern Germany during the Second World War, Hildebrandt and his mother received emergency food supplies from MCC and were later helped by the organization to immigrate to Canada.

Approximately 20 years later, he signed up to serve with MCC in Nigeria through the Teachers Abroad Program (TAP). And today, although admittedly slowing down a bit, he continues to give back to MCC, looking in at the Winkler thrift shop three to four times a week for donations in need of repair.

Still, the most common drawing factor for shop volunteers is a shared belief in MCC's mission in the name of Christ. Local board chair Dave Penner says that the Winkler MCC Thrift Shop offers people like him an opportunity to do mission work right at home.

"They can walk to work and yet they can help people out in Afghanistan and Iraq and Haiti," says Penner. "I know it encourages them, and it's good to see that people feel useful living in our community and being able to help."

Hildebrandt says, "As volunteers, we all come together as brothers and sisters and we do our work. We never point out that this is from that kind of church or the other kind. It doesn't come into the life of MCC ... We know that there are different churches represented there, but they all work together as a unit, so it's wonderful."

The shop's community is a collective effort, built "hand in hand," adds Kornelson.

As MCC Thrift celebrates its 50th anniversary this year, shops across Manitoba encourage people of all ages to join an MCC Thrift volunteer community. Visit mccthriftmb.com to learn more and connect with your local MCC Thrift shop.

Bud McCormick was Dominion City's first professional hockey player. He is pictured above holding the trophy after winning a Provencher Hockey League championship with Emerson in the mid-1950s. McCormick passed away last week.

By Ty Dilello

The first professional hockey player to come out of Dominion City passed away April 13 at the age of 92.

Bud McCormick was born in Dominion City on March 15, 1930. The family moved to Winnipeg when he was eleven, where his hockey career began to take off. His talent for the sport was first brought to light when he was awarded a prize and certificate for being the most outstanding player of playground hockey at the age of 12.

McCormick went through the ranks of bantam and midget with Fort Rouge and was a member of the Winnipeg Canadiens Juveniles for two years prior to playing junior hockey.

After having played two months as a member of the Winnipeg Canadiens junior team, McCormick became dissatisfied with the manner in which the club was handled. He was snapped up by the Winnipeg Black Hawks junior team and had a great two seasons with them, where he was scoring at over a point-per-game pace.

He later attended a Chicago Black Hawks NHL training camp in the fall of 1950, where he rubbed shoulders with the likes of Hockey Hall of Famers Bill Mosienko and Doug Bentley.

In 1951-52, McCormick played pro hockey in England for the Harringay Racers, where he was one of his team's leading scorers. He then returned to Winnipeg for work, while still playing hockey in southern Manitoba for the likes of the Dominion City Combines and Emerson, winning championships with both in the mid-1950s in the Provencher (Southeast) Hockey League.

Bud and his wife Diedre were married for 67 years. They had three children together and settled in the Fort Garry neighbourhood of Winnipeg, where he had a successful career in sales and marketing for Labatts Breweries for over 25 years.

He continued to coach and play hockey during this time with the Manitoba NHL Oldtimers from 1965 to 1977. McCormick is perhaps best known for then organizing and founding the Winnipeg Clubs Oldtimers hockey team.

"There were so many oldtimers that wanted to play, but there wasn't room on the Manitoba Oldtimers team, so Bud went to Labatts and asked if they'd like to start a team," recalled Diedre McCormick. "So Labatts sponsored them, and the Winnipeg Clubs was born."

"Dad asked Ab McDonald to be the captain," added son Clark McCormick. "And that helped give it more legitimacy, and then a few more guys that played in the NHL headed over. They ended up going to play over the years all over in places like Russia and Germany. It was a big thrill for a lot of retired hockey players."

McCormick left his mark on the hockey community in Manitoba and will be greatly missed by everyone that knew him.

Winkler Festival of the Arts returns

By Voice staff

The Winkler Festival of the Arts made a triumphant return last week.

For the first time since 2019, nearly 200 young performers took to the stage at the Winkler Bergthaler Mennonite Church April 19-22 to demonstrate their vocal and piano skills.

Participants had a chance to win awards and scholarships and also receive constructive criticism from vocal adjudicator Loretta Thorleifson and piano adjudicator Anneli Loepp Thiessen.

In the vocal sessions, Rachel Hesom took home the Justina Wiebe Trophy for best all-around performer as well as a scholarship.

Also winning vocal scholarships were Norah Thiessen, Zahira Dyck, and Alexi Ginter.

Dyck and Ginter also received provincial recommendations, which means they can compete at the 2022 Provincial Music and Arts Festival taking place in Brandon next month.

In the piano sessions, Evelyn Alles won the Adjudicator's Choice Award. Alles also took home the Gr. 10 award.

Other awards went to Kaylin Guse (Gr. 2), Rachel Hesom (Gr. 3), Cadence Martens (Gr. 4), Keziah Dyck (Gr. 5), Grace Xia (Gr. 6), Emily Maier (Gr. 7 and sacred music divisions), Jakob Klassen (Gr. 8), Janika and Jaselah Friesen (duet), Breanna Dyck (popular music), and Michael Wall (stud-ies).

Scholarships went to Luanne Guse, Moise Onishchuk, Gavin Buhler, Jael Schaefer, Nathanael Mierau, Emily Maier, Elias Mierau, and Joy Zia.

And earning the chance to represent Winkler at provincials was Moise Onishchuk, Rachel Hesom, Cadence Martens, Jael Schaefer, Nathanael Mierau, Grace Xia, Emily Maier, Elias Mierau, Jakob Klassen, Joy Xia, and Evelyn Alles.

of these people ... that may be their first show ever," he said, adding as well that it was an opportunity to give people a platform. "I recognized the importance of people being allowed to have a voice and to have space, be given the chance to take up space in the most successful and enjoyable and effective way possible."

One particular style of art that Dandridge-Evancio became especially interested in at one point was pochoir, which is a stencil process for making colored prints or adding color to a printed key illustration.

"Practice-wise, this is probably the most interesting thing I do ... this is basically a manual form of print making," he suggested.

"It was one of the first forms of creating a full image through kind of stencilled on pieces, and it was particularly popular and vibrant in the 1930s and 1940s in France as a response to the machine printing."

Dandridge-Evancio sees it as a great way to produce more rich and colourful images.

"That's kind of why some now are going back to it," he suggested. "What I particularly like in it is the kind of meditative aspect of it, breaking down the image into it's smaller parts."

He learned this technique while attending school in Lethbridge and learning about print making.

"I kind of fell in love with it; everyone else just hated it because it just took so long," he added.

His artistic journey has continued to go in interesting directions.

In 2021, he spearheaded an Instagram takeover for the Art Gallery of Southwestern Manitoba.

"I reached out to three other artists ... they all submitted work for this takeover, which ultimately culminated in a live panel discussion," he noted. "It was the most ambitious thing in which I've seen myself in regards to a PRIDE thing."

He currently has his exhibit The Cabela Boys on display at the Turtle Mountain Arts Council gallery in Killarney. The show is described as having been conceived as a humorous criticism of female dress in popular media but having evolved into a sincere exploration of queer identity.

Dandridge-Evancio also has other projects in the works, including graphic novel.

5 tips for planning a successful wedding

Did you recently get engaged? Are you planning your wedding? If so, follow these five tips to ensure your big day is a success.

1. ARRANGE ACCOMMODATIONS

If your reception is taking place in the countryside or you have guests attending from out of town, consider making arrangements with nearby hotels. This way you can ensure people attending your wedding will have somewhere to stay.

2. BE PREPARED FOR ANY WEATHER

It's important to be prepared for any weather on your wedding day, especially if your ceremony or reception will take place outdoors. You should think about what to do if it rains, how to keep your guests warm in the evening and if there's a need to ward off bugs.

3. SET AND KEEP A BUDGET

Wedding costs can escalate quickly, so it's essential to keep an eye on your budget. Consider placing all your important documents and bills in a binder and only using one credit card to pay for your wedding expenses.

4. DETERMINE IF KIDS WILL BE INVOLVED

Decide if you want to invite little ones to your wedding. If children are welcome, specify whether they must be under parental supervision or if childcare will be provided.

5. KEEP A LIST OF CONTACTS

You must co-ordinate many different people and services on your big day, including the caterer and DJ. Therefore, it's a good idea to keep all important phone numbers on hand leading up to and during the wedding.

If you want to make sure you don't forget anything on your big day, consider working with an experienced wedding planner.

Brunch receptions: an emerging wedding trend

It's becoming increasingly trendy to host a wedding brunch instead of a dinner. If you're planning your big day, here are a few good reasons to consider having a brunch reception.

AN EARLY EVENT

Do you find it hard to stay up until the wee hours of the morning? Are you inviting several seniors or young children to your wedding? Do some guests prefer not to drive at night? For all of these reasons, a morning wedding might be a great option. This way, everyone will be in high spirits from start to end.

AN IRRESISTIBLE MENU

Contrary to what some people say, brunch doesn't have to be simple or pared down. In fact, you can serve up a variety of fancy hot and cold dishes, including:

- Local cheeses
- Belgian waffles
- Dauphinois potatoes
- Salmon gravlax
- Duck breast
- Eggs benedict
- Fruit cocktails
- Game sausages
- Niçoise salad
- Viennese pastries

If this trending wedding idea appeals to you, find out if the restaurants, reception halls and caterers in your area offer a brunch menu.

How to choose the perfect wedding dress

Choosing a wedding dress can be both exciting and nerve-racking. To help you create the look of your dreams, here are a few tips.

MAKE A PLAN

Before you try on a single gown, make a list of the criteria you're looking for in a wedding dress. Do you want a certain cut, style or length? Do you want to show off your shoulders or hour-glass figure? Establishing some criteria will allow you to narrow down the choices.

USE PROPS

In addition to your list of criteria, bring along pictures of dresses to show to the bridal store consultant. They can use the information you provide to quickly find several different gowns for you to try.

TRY DIFFERENT STYLES

After the first fitting, you may realize that the dresses that look good in pictures aren't the right fit for your figure. Don't worry, your consultant can suggest other styles until you find the dress of your dreams.

Additionally, keep in mind that all wedding dresses need to be altered. Therefore, don't be dissuaded if a dress is too long, short or loose.

Whether you decide to buy or rent a wedding dress, choose the one that makes you feel most beautiful. For inspiration, visit your local bridal stores.

5 original wedding themes

Are you planning a wedding? If you're currently getting ready for your big day and looking for an original theme, here are five you may want to consider.

1. CANDY

Choose decor elements in bright colours that evoke sweets, candies and pastries. You can tie this theme together by setting up a candy bar for your guests.

2. FAIRY TALE

Book your venue in a castle-like setting, choose an outfit worthy of royalty and arrive in a horse-drawn carriage. You could also include props from the fairy tales you love to decorate the tables.

3. GLOBETROTTER

Incorporate suitcases, passports, airplanes and maps into table settings, photo booths and other decor. You could also decorate each table to represent a certain country or continent.

4. RAINBOW

Hang origami flowers, balloons or umbrellas in an array of hues from the ceiling, and decorate your chosen venue with accessories in all the colours of the rainbow.

5. RETRO

Decorate your venue with vintage accessories and second-hand furniture, and visit your local thrift store to find old-fashioned cutlery, vases, tablecloths and picture frames.

To stock up on accessories that match your theme, contact a wedding planner or visit your local stores.

Impacts of seed-placed fertilizer on canola emergence

By Warren Ward,
Canola Council of Canada

Toxicity and salt effect from fertilizer can damage canola seed and seedlings, and reduce the return on investment for seed. One way to increase canola emergence rates is to keep all fertilizer out of the seed row —except for a starter rate of phosphate.

The risk of seed-placed fertilizer comes from the nitrogen component of ammonium phosphate, ammonium sulphate and all nitrogen fertilizers. Ammonia can damage crops through direct toxicity while nitrate will damage seedlings by desiccation through the salt effect. Potassium fertilizers also have a high salt index and should not go in the seed row.

Why is phosphorus the exception?

Phosphorus supply during the first two to six weeks of canola growth is critical to achieve optimal yield. Given that phosphorus availability is reduced under wet, cold conditions, canola benefits from a seed-placed supply of phosphorus fertilizer.

But not too much. Apply just enough to give each seed equal access to starter phosphate prills or droplets but not so much that the ammonium reduces emergence. A seed-placed rate equivalent to 20 lb./ac. of P₂O₅ (~40 lb./ac. of monoammonium phosphate) will balance those two objectives.

The Canola Council of Canada urges producers to consider keeping fertilizer out of the seed row, except for a starter rate of phosphate.

This approach shows the interactions of the Right rate at the Right time in the Right place as part of 4R Nutrient Stewardship.

How to reduce the nitrogen risk

Under some circumstances, growers can safely apply a little extra ammonium phosphate or nitrogen fertilizer with canola seed. Factors that reduce the risk from seed-placed nitrogen are:

Seedbed moisture. Water dilutes the concentration of nitrogen molecules around the seed and seedling, and disperses nitrogen molecules throughout the soil. This moisture reduces fertilizer concentrations around the seed.

Fertilizer source. Polymer coating or urease inhibitors slow the release of ammonia and ammonium from urea.

Seed bed utilization (SBU). High SBU – which can be achieved with wider openers and narrow row spacing – will lower the risk because seed and fertilizer are spread over a larger area.

Soil pH. Lower soil pH reduces the risk from seed-placed nitrogen. That is why safe rates are generally higher in Saskatchewan and Alberta than in Manitoba.

Soil texture. Heavy (clay) soils lower the risk and light (sandy) soils increase the risk.

Test the safety of seed-placed rates

These factors don't eliminate the risk entirely, so a large percentage of fertilizer will still have to go outside the seed row to give canola seeds a safe place to emerge and contribute to yield.

To test the effect of seed-placed fertilizer, turn off seed-placed fertilizer runs for a 100-foot strip in some fields. Mark these areas and then go back and do plant counts early in the season to compare treated and untreated strips.

The Nutrient Management section at CanolaEncyclopedia.ca has more on the placement of fertilizer (under each macronutrient heading), and a chapter on the 4R stewardship practices – Right source of fertilizer used at the Right rate, at the Right time and in the Right place. For a more detailed version of this article, look for "Right rates for seed-placed fertilizer" at canolawatch.org/fundamentals. Critics give provincial budget the thumbs down

By Lorne Stelmach

The 2022 provincial budget unveiled earlier this month came up short of what is needed in the eyes of some critics and provincial organizations.

Premier Heather Stefanson's first budget fails to deliver the solutions families need, suggested Opposition NDP leader Wab Kinew.

"Rural families are looking for hope. With her first budget, Premier Stefanson had the chance to deliver it, but she failed to meet the moment," he said following the April 12 budget presentation by Finance Minister Cameron Friesen.

"We know this isn't the budget rural families wanted," Kinew said. "Instead of setting herself apart from Brian Pallister, she repeated his mistakes by continuing to under fund health care and schools. Instead of making life more affordable, she's raising hydro rates at the cabinet table and freezing funding to municipalities."

Manitoba Liberal leader Dougald Lamont described the budget as "flimsy" with over $1 billion in promises that had been made before.

"They are passing off pouring concrete as investments in health and education, when we have nursing shortages and children going hungry," he said. "This is a lost opportunity to reinforce critical systems like health and education and making sure Manitobans can fulfill their potential through education."

He particularly noted that the PCs are extending the freeze on funding for municipalities across the province for a sixth straight year. And while the $11 million increase in Manitoba Housing funding is desperately needed, due to the decades long maintenance deficit it is nowhere near enough given the dire state of many complexes.

"People are the economy, people are health care and people are our education system. The PCs promised a change in tone, but the problem was substance, and there's no change there," said Lamont.

Frustration came from a number of other fronts as well.

The Canadian Federation of Independent Business expressed its disappointment that the budget included few measures to really help small businesses' post-pandemic recovery and in fact excludes small businesses from some of the budget's only cost relief measures.

"Two years into the pandemic, many small businesses are still in survival mode. Only 41 per cent are back to normal sales, and many have accumulated tens of thousands of dollars in pandemic-related debt," noted Kathleen Cook, CFIB provincial affairs director. "The budget was a missed opportunity to help small firms facing massive cost increases on virtually every line of their own budgets."

"We were hoping to see cost relief measures introduced in the budget to help small businesses recover. The Manitoba government has missed an opportunity to help small businesses move beyond survival mode."

The Canadian Union of Public Employees, which is Canada's largest union representing more than 700,000 members, suggested the budget continues to put public services at risk.

"Manitobans expect to see a budget that protects the public services they rely on," says Gina McKay, president of CUPE Manitoba. "This government continues to cut taxes for ideological reasons rather than fully supporting our schools and health care facilities."

CUPE is concerned that the government's plan to reach a balanced budget by 2028 will come on the backs of Manitoba workers and public services families rely on, she further suggested.

"We are also deeply concerned the government will look to privatizing,

Nine great reasons to use a rain barrel or two

Submitted by the Redboine Watershed District

An old-fashioned idea is gaining new interest for home dwellers, gardeners and people interested in protecting waterways and the environment while saving money on their water bills—rain barrels are back in style.

Rain barrels collect free water from a roof and store it for future use in gardens and for watering lawns, shrubs, and trees.

There are many great reasons to use a rain barrel or connect several in series to collect even more rainwater.

1. Rain barrels provide a free supply of water for many uses.
2. Rainwater is free of chlorine and fluoride, typically found in tap water and it is the preferred choice of local residents with the best looking gardens.

3. Rainwater can help reduce the pollution. Homeowners with rain barrels can disconnect their downspouts from the sewer systems, resulting in redirection of rainwater to permeable ground surfaces that filter and absorb the water. This natural filtering helps ensure a cleaner and replenished water supply for the entire community's streams and rivers and prevents rainwater from going into the storm management systems.

4. When communities don't have to manage as much stormwater, they can keep down water costs and related charges and taxes.

5. Rainwater, which is naturally acidic, can balance out the alkaline nature of soils near chemically basic concrete.

6. Rainwater also has the benefit of being a similar temperature as the air, and does not shock plants' roots like tap water does. Overall, rainwater is a healthier option for plants.

7. When outdoor water restrictions are in place, water from a rain barrel can be used to wash vehicles or water lawns.

8. Residents can also use the water to clean floors and do laundry, and having a source of stored water can be beneficial if an emergency ever arises.

9. Redirecting rainwater away from a home's foundation by using a rain barrel can help avoid flooding in basements, and prevent damage caused by cold water.

The Redboine Watershed District has recently launched a rain barrel sale to raise funds for the Treherne Elementary School Pollinator Garden Project, with a recognition of the need for and the value of rain barrels in maintaining the health of our home gardens and the environment.

Rain barrels can be ordered in advance of the June 24 distribution date online at www.RainBarrel.ca/redboine.

For more information contact the Redboine Watershed District at redboinewd@gmail.com or 204-526-2578.

TRIP rebates up for grabs again in 2022

You can get reimbursed in part for Manitoba hotel stays, attraction admissions next month

By Voice staff

An initiative created amidst the pandemic is back this year to continue to encourage Manitobans to be stay at home tourists.

The Manitoba Chambers of Commerce is again offering its Tourism Rebate Incentive Program (TRIP) from May 6-16.

In 2021, TRIP returned $2.2 million in rebates to Manitobans who embarked on adventures, road trips, and staycations to help bolster tourism throughout the province, and the tracked activity resulted in a total of $5.5 million in direct spending at recreational properties.

"This program made a huge difference to tourism in Manitoba and we're excited to be able to do it again," said Chuck Davidson, president and CEO of the Manitoba Chambers of Commerce.

"To say that TRIP 2021 was a success would be a huge understatement because, thanks to almost 25,000 Manitobans who took advantage of the rebate, this recovery program had a massive impact on Manitoba's beleaguered tourism industry," he said. "With this new round of TRIP rebates, we're encouraging Manitobans to get out there this spring to tour our beautiful province while supporting our valuable recreational assets."

Surveyed TRIP participants indicated they spent an average of $510 on their trip for total estimated spending of $11.2 million, which represents roughly a 5-to-1 return on investment.

Fifty-six per cent of surveyed participants noted their trip was not planned prior to the launch of the program, and over half said the incentive motivated them to take an overnight trip.

In all, TRIP 2021 resulted in Manitobans paying for almost 17,800 individual hotel nights, 2,877 hotel stay and play packages, and more than 4,700 attraction admission fees for a total of $5.5 million in direct spending at recreational properties, organizers note.

For 2022, Manitoba residents age 18+ are eligible for a $100 rebate on hotel, motel, or resort stays booked between May 6-16 and a 50 per cent rebate on general admission to one of 31 participating star attractions across the province that week.

Proof of purchase receipts need to be submitted online at www.tripmb.ca by 11:59 p.m. on Monday, May 23.

Travel Manitoba President and CEO

Colin Ferguson said TRIP is a terrific way to find a staycation that speaks to you.

"You might be dreaming about recharging on a weekend spa getaway, or thinking about rediscovering a hidden gem you visited long ago," he said. "You could explore a region of the province that has always piqued your interest or book a fun waterslide hotel stay with the kids.

"Whatever type of getaway you design, TRIP is a win-win. You'll enjoy a break, see our beautiful province, and get something back."

End of the road for Winkler Flyers

By Ty Dilello

It wasn't meant to be for the Winkler Flyers as they fell in the MJHL semi-finals in five games to the Dauphin Kings.

From start to finish in this second round series, the Kings controlled the pace of play for the majority of each game. Dauphin outshot Winkler in four of five games and was perfect on home ice, going 3-0.

After losing the first two games of the series on the road in Dauphin, the Flyers rallied to win Game 3 at home 5-4.

Just when the momentum in the series looked to be shifting in Winkler's favour, they dropped Game 4 at home 5-2 to put them on the brink of elimination.

Winkler travelled to Dauphin through the rainstorm last Saturday for Game 5, but it just wasn't meant to be. Dauphin was victorious 5-1 to win the series four-game-to-one and end the Flyers' season.

"Coming back here to Winkler and winning the first game at home was exciting," said Flyers' head coach Justin Falk on Monday. "We lost our captain in Game 2 due to injury, and we rallied to win Game 3, which was great. In that crucial Game 4, we had a few bounces and calls go against us, and that's sometimes all it takes. But they were all close games, and our guys battled hard. I really loved our effort."

Despite the season ending a little prematurely, Falk is tremendously proud of the way his team carried themselves the entire year.

The boys finished the regular season in second place in the league's East Division on the strength of a 33-16-3-2 record, trailing only Steinbach. They then knocked the Winnipeg Blues out of the playoffs in the first round in six games.

"These guys all worked very hard since day one of training camp. They've grown their character, their game and grown as a team. Seeing the tears on their faces after the final game, I feel for them and am right there with them. I'm just so proud of them."

"On behalf of the city of Winkler, the investment these guys put in our community—everyone should be proud of these young men and their efforts. It's a special group."

First-year head coach Falk hopes to be around next season and attempt to bring another MJHL championship to Winkler.

"I'm excited about the work I've been able to do in Winkler one year in here and proud of the staff and everyone around the scenes that have been along here for the ride," he said. "This season we've had doesn't happen without them, so I'm proud of our support staff and our players here. Next season, we're looking to keep up the momentum that we've built this year."

The Dauphin Kings will now wait and see who they will compete against for the MJHL championship, with the Steinbach Pistons leading the Virde Oil Capitals three games to two in their best-of-seven series.

CWE returns to Morden May 14

By Lorne Stelmach

Pro wrestling is set to make its comeback in Morden this spring.

The event set for Saturday, May 14 marks the return of Canadian Wrestling's Elite for the first time after a number of aborted attempts thanks to the pandemic.

"We tried multiple times throughout the pandemic, then restrictions would happen, and things would close down," said organizer Danny Warren, who also wrestles as six-time CWE champion Hotshot Danny Dugan.

"We were able to do a couple outdoor event. Definitely wasn't at capacity or the level we would like to be, so we're excited to begin that again," he said, noting that their last indoor event locally was way back in November 2019.

Warren said a lot of their top stars are being lined up to be in action, including the return of his alter-ego "Hotshot."

It will be part of a smaller scale, regional tour, as the typical cross country tour is cost prohibitive right now, especially with gas prices.

"So we're going to be doing a lot of mini-tours, and we're going to be strictly putting together some smaller size tours in regions and then go from there," Warren said.

Warren sees them possibly coming back through Morden every three or four months, but perhaps more often if the events are successful. The Morden-Winkler area has usually brought them a good sized crowd.

"It started off as a town we would do maybe a couple times a year ... but with us being based out of Winnipeg and the success of the events, we've been able to come back with a couple more throughout the year," said Warren.

"The wrestling fans there are pretty passionate and continue to support us as many times as we come out," he added. "We also have a lot of community and business support as well that help make these events possible.

"We're very grateful for all the community support that makes wrestling possible there. We're coming back with a full size card, so it's going to be exciting.

The action takes place May 14 at the Access Event Centre with VIP doors opening at 6 p.m., general admission at 6:30 p.m., and bell time at 7 p.m.

VIP tickets are $26 while general admission is $21 in advance or $24 at the door. Advance tickets are available at Giant Tiger or for purchase online at cwetickets.com.

Canucks beat Twisters to win MMJHL title

By Voice staff

The St. James Jr. Canucks are the MMJHL champions.

In Game 5 on Monday, the Canucks swept things 5-0 to take the best-of-seven series four games to one.

Kale Price, Zach Greenwood, Tyrone Willan, Brady Whitely, and Ashton Romaniuk did the scoring while net-minder Noah Gilbert had a perfect night, denying all 24 shots the Twisters sent his way.

The Canucks headed into what proved to be the series' final match ahead by two games.

They had taken a 2-1 series lead with a 2-1 home win last Thursday (St. James goals came courtesy of Whitely and Griffin Haight, while Nathan Ayotte scored for the Twisters), following on the heels of Pembina Valley's 4-2 Game 2 win two nights earlier (scoring that night was Ayotte, Jordan Keck, TJ Matuszewski, and Tyler van Deynze for Pembina Valley while Haight and Matthew Mason-Vandel did the honours for St.

James).

Game 4 went their way as well 5-2, with Kale Price, Rory Neill, Trent Haf-danson, Luke Kurtis, and Ethan Unruh scoring for the Canucks. Pembina Valley's two goals that night came from Mike Heppner and Jacob Carels.

> FIND YOUR ROOTS, FROM PG. 16

A lot of people start to dive into researching their ancestors and become overwhelmed by the prospect of digging into all the potential sources of information out there.

"It looks real easy when you watch the commercials and you go onto Ancestry.com ... but it's not always that simple," van der Steen says, noting there are a lot of family trees available online that are filled with incorrect information. It can be daunting to track down the right records to correct them—or to even know how to find out if they're wrong in the first place. "Not everybody knows how to look or where to look. It can take a lot of patience to sit there and read old documents and go through all this old information—and there's lots.

You can go through so much stuff ... and then get frustrated and give up.

"I enjoy the chase. I enjoy the challenge of trying to find the right information for people."

Rural Roots' services range from help tracking down a particular ancestor's story all the way to filling out an entire family tree, with fees based contracting out and selling off public services in order to balance their budget," McKay said. "We need a government that takes bold steps to support public services, especially during a pandemic that is not yet over. This budget doesn't do that."

Doctors Manitoba president Dr. Kristjan Thompson, meanwhile, was encouraged by some of the health care commitments from the province.

on the scope and complexity of the project. She offers consultations for free.

Van der Steen is fond of a quote by author Laurence Overmire: "History remembers only the celebrated, genealogy remembers them all."

"I think it's important to know your family history, even if they just lived regular lives," she says. "When you do this research, you start to realize that the people hundreds of years ago that are at the beginning of your family tree are real people ... you want to know where they came from, who they were.

"You want to remember them."

You can learn more and get in touch with van der Steen online at rural-rootsgenealogy.com or call 204-436-2616.

"From a financial perspective, the Manitoba budget has appropriately prioritized investing in health care, though the results will be measured not by dollars spent but by shortening wait times, clearing the pandemic backlog, and recruiting and retaining more nurses, doctors and other health care workers to ensure patients get the care they need.

"The significant investment in health care is an important step toward rebuilding a medical system that has been under tremendous pressure," Thompson added. "While this can't be undone with money alone, matching the government's financial investment with a meaningful partnership with physicians will help to ensure our medical system recovers and is better prepared for the next health crisis."

Susie Schwartz

By Susie Schwartz

Life can be painful, and it seems especially so these days. Personal struggles, health woes, a pandemic, and now a war in Ukraine, thanks to Russia. I'm overwhelmed, you?

I had to avoid the news leading up to the first bombings of Ukraine. I tend to soak in the pain of others (Hmm...a contributing health factor?) and I felt powerless to do anything but worry. I'm sure I'm not the only one. When our fears became reality and Russia struck, I forced myself to open my eyes and heart to the truth – whether this turns into another world war or not, people are dying and need help.

But how?

For me, that answer slammed me in the face as I opened social media on day two of the bombings.

We all know that money is needed in times such as these, but we don't always know where to send it (if we have some to send at all.) I saw an Instagram post saying something like, 'Where there are people, there are people with Type 1 Diabetes, and they need our help.' It went on to describe how there were not only shortages of insulin, but power outages for refrigeration for insulin. And a need for batteries. And pump hoses. And insulin pens. It hit me hard: People were not only desperate to get to safety from the bombs and gunfire, but also might die from a lack of medical supplies. I had my answer of what to do. I could send extra supplies and/or money to the Ukrainian people towards diabetes supplies specifically.

This column is not about just Diabetes though, as there are so many needs. It is about helping where we can, and even better in an area we are passionate towards. You see, this will better keep us motivated to do our part, but also can be a gift of perspective and take us out of our own problems. Self-focus can be our worst enemy sometimes. (Although, sometimes necessary.)

Even if unable to help with the needs of Ukraine, you can still apply this principal. Phone a friend going through a hard time; donate unwanted goods to charity; send a 'just because' card to your grandmother. I promise you, it will lift your spirits as well as the beneficiaries.

And we could all use our spirits lifted, I'd say.

PUBLIC NOTICE Regarding By-Law No. 2279-22 for Revised Water and Wastewater Rates

The Council of the City of Winkler has scheduled a public hearing at Winkler City Hall, 185 Main Street, Winkler, MB on the 10th day of May, 2022 at 6.30 p.m. to present the Revised Water and Wastewater Rates.

The City of Winkler is responsible for setting the water and sewer rates for their Utility. The utility consists of both old and new infrastructure, with plans for major investments in a new wastewater treatment plant as well as a water treatment plant expansion. The aggressive growth in the community is driving the need to expand and upgrade the utility, this aggressive growth is anticipated to continue into the foreseeable future.

The City produces ~ 70% of its own water supply and purchases the remaining ~30% of the supply from the Pembina Water Cooperative. Therefore, the City is accustomed to passthrough charges as PVWC rates increase.

Although the current rates have been in effect since 2012 and have generally been self sufficient, the pending WWTF and WTP expansion will significantly impact the City's budgets with new debentures, assets, and O&M costs. The main intent of this rate assessment is to provide a gradual rate process over the next 3-4 years as the new plants come online. The City's objective is to show a consistent stepped increase (~ 5% per year) to the projected rates required by 2025 for the new assets; avoiding a large single increase in 2025. The proposed interim rates should also be fair to customers while providing adequate revenue to the utility for operations, maintenance, and reserves for future capital and replacement costs.

Although the proposed interim rates may be approved for a three-year period; a five-year horizon was shown to project the utility into a more stable operating period. The intent is to minimize a drastic rate revision in three to four years when the utility is more stable and has more accurate historical operation costs.

The current rates and proposed rates are provided:

	Current Rate	Proposed 2022	Proposed 2023	Proposed 2024	Proposed 2025
Quarterly service charge	$18.15	$27.50	$27.50	$27.50	$27.50
Water per 1,000 Imperial Gallons	$9.98	$10.18	$10.21	$10.23	$10.28

5/8" Minimum Quarterly Charges	$67.35	$79.43	$81.65	$83.81	$86.09
Sewer only for Residential Customers	$69.51	$85.54	$90.22	$95.82	$101.50

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Intermediate

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

OBITUARY

Magdalene Wieler (nee Siemens)
1945 - 2022

Magdalene Wieler, 76, of Winkler, MB, passed away after a long battle with dementia on Thursday, April 14, 2022.

Maggie was born in Altona to Henry and Margaret Siemens on October 14, 1945, the youngest of four siblings. She graduated from Mennonite Collegiate Institute in Gretna in 1963 and married Abe Wieler, the love of her life, on October 30, 1965 at Altona Bergthaler Mennonite Church. They purchased their farm outside of Haskett, MB in 1965 and farmed successfully for many years. Maggie spent many fall evenings bringing supper out to the field for Abe and later their kids during harvest season. She also played piano for a number of Abe's quartets, chiming in with her beautiful alto voice when she could. These hymns stayed with her through the rest of her life, and once her disease robbed her of her memories, a chorus of How Great Thou Art or It Is Well (which she knew every word of) could always be counted on to calm and reassure her. Maggie's kind and caring nature made her a wonderful mother and grandmother. Family was important to her and Abe - they hosted many family meals, weekends, and trips to Grand Forks, Alberta and South Dakota. They also made many trips into Winnipeg and out to BC for many, many grandkid concerts and sports games. Maggie was also very creative, she made sure all her kids and grandkids were kept warm and cozy by her knitting and sewing. Some of the fondest memories her grandchildren have of her include many hours of colouring together, being taught (unsuccessfully) how to knit, and playing many games of Sorry.

Maggie was preceded in death by her parents, Henry and Margaret, her brother-in-law, John Klassen as well as her beloved husband, Abe. She is survived by her children: Preston (Myra) Wieler, and their children, Benjamy (Annaliese), Halle (Lyam), and Sam (Laura); Conway (Shanon) Wieler and their children, Cailey (Daniel), Landon, and Jay; Tara (David) Fehr and their children, Riley, Brayden, and Adam; Janelle (Jonathan) Sawatzky and their children, Ty and Dane. She is also survived by her siblings, Sara Sawatzky, Shirley Klassen and Ed Siemens as well as their families.

A celebration of life was held at 1:00 p.m. on Monday, April 18, 2022 at the Fort Garry MB Church in Winnipeg with interment at Westridge Memorial Gardens in Winkler.

The family of Maggie wishes to extend their sincere thanks to the incredible staff of Riverview Health Centre unit AB1. The support and kindness shown to us in Mom's last week as well as the exceptional care they provided for her during her seven months at Riverview meant the world to us.

We will miss Maggie (and her hugs) so much, but we take comfort in the fact that she is finally reunited with her husband, Abe, and her beloved Saviour. There was a joyful reunion in heaven on April 14!

So I'll cherish the old rugged cross
Till my trophies at last I lay down
I will cling to the old rugged cross
And exchange it someday for a crown

CELEBRATING VOLUNTEER MONTH

Micro-volunteering: quick bursts of benevolence

Are you looking for a way to give back to your community while also juggling a hectic schedule? If so, then micro-volunteering might be right for you. Here's what you should know about this approach to community action, which has been growing in popularity over the last decade or so.

What is it?

Micro-volunteering is based on the notion that people are more likely to volunteer their time in short, convenient bursts. It refers to volunteer tasks that take no more than an hour or two to complete and can be done whenever they fit into the person's schedule. Importantly, micro-volunteering doesn't require an application, training process or any ongoing commitment.

What are the advantages?

The main benefit of micro-volunteering is that it's flexible. This makes it a great option for those who have a busy schedule and would otherwise forgo volunteering because of a lack of time. And since the majority of micro-volunteering happens online, people can have an impact from virtually anywhere.

How can you help?

Micro-volunteering can take on various forms, and many tasks become contributions to a larger project. For example, you can:

- Sign a petition or participate in a letter-writing campaign
- Pick up garbage in your neighbourhood while on a walk
- Participate in a research project or survey
- Help a senior with their groceries or yard work
- Share donation opportunities on social media
- Bake cupcakes for a charity fundraiser sale
- Knit a hat for a shelter or worthy cause in your area

To find out more about short- and long-term volunteer opportunities in your community, reach out to a local volunteer centre or consult Volunteer Canada's national volunteer matching platform at volunteer.ca.
