On the hunt in Morden Park

Weekly treasure hunt has kids looking for trading cards, comic books

By Lorne Stelmach

Devin Moir is sharing his love for comic books and collectible cards by making a game of it for others in Morden.

Since the beginning of May, Moir has been organizing a treasure hunt where he hides books and cards in various locations in Morden Park and invites kids to try to find them.

He found the inspiration for the idea in part through his own young children.

"I enjoy it. I hide things on my kids once in a while and they have to find it," Moir said last week as he contemplated the upcoming Saturday treasure hunt.

"I have two boys of my own, and we like to collect Pokémon, comics ... preferably older comics ... and I thought I have so many doubles at home, why not share them ... hide them in the park and have some fun with it."

Part of his thought with the treasure hunt as well was for it to be a way to get kids away from their phones and devices and outside exploring.

"This all started because I'm seeing kids on their phones a lot ... I decided to help the community by getting them off the couch," Moir said. "I didn't have anything like this when I was a kid ... it would have been fun ... but I was outside a lot anyway."

Morden Park struck him as the ideal location for the treasure hunt, as it is both easily accessible and offers lots of potential hiding spots.

"But I am running out of new hiding places," reflected Moir, who started hiding goodies May 6 and has been doing most weekends since, weather and scheduling permitting.

"I have to watch for other events because I don't want to intrude on someone else's event or anything like that," he noted. "I just do it if the weather will allow. I get up at six, and I hide the books like maybe around seven because the thing starts at 8. There has been a few early risers."

The initiative has attracted some interest in the community.

"I have 56 followers on the Facebook page ... I don't actually know how many have actually participated, but every now and then somebody will share what they found ... that's kind of cool," Moir said. "And I noticed that some people take their own cards and will put some back and trade with other kids."

"I've got to do something with all my extras, and I live in an apartment, so it kind of clutters up the place ... what better way to get rid of them by sharing it and letting the kids find it?" he said. "And it maybe helps them read a bit more ... my little guy has just started reading."

West Nile virus-carrying skeeters found in local trap

By Voice staff

Manitoba Health's weekly West Nile virus (WNV) update reports that an infected Culex tarsalis mosquito was collected from a trap in the City of Winkler during the week of June 25 to July 1.

The week actually saw a slight decrease in the overall numbers of Culex tarsalis mosquitoes in Manitoba compared to the previous week, though activity was detected in all but two of the 21 communities putting traps out.

Including the infected skeeters in Winkler and Winnipeg, there has been one other positive mosquito pool in southern Manitoba so far this summer and two birds who tested positive for the disease reported to Manitoba Health.

Predicted weather conditions for this week are conducive to Culex tarsalis activity, the province notes, and while the current risk of WNV exposure is low, this will increase as we enter further into the historical high period of July and August.

Manitobans are encouraged to reduce the risk of mosquito bites and exposure to WNV by:

- reducing the amount of time spent outdoors during peak mosquito hours between dusk and dawn;
- using an appropriate mosquito repellent;
- wearing light-coloured, loose-fitting clothing with long sleeves and pant legs; and
- maintaining door and window screens so they fit tightly and are free of holes.

Manitobans can also reduce the number of mosquitoes around their home by eliminating standing water on their properties, including regularly cleaning anything that might collect water, ensuring rain barrels are covered with mosquito screening or are tightly sealed around the downspout, and improving landscaping to prevent standing water around the home.

Public Notice is hereby given that Enbridge Pipelines Inc. (Enbridge) intends to conduct the following Pesticide Program from June 1, 2023 – November 15, 2023, to control noxious weeds on Enbridge ROW's, temporary workspaces, stations and various facilities along the Enbridge Mainline and Bakken corridors.

The herbicide active ingredients to be used include:

Altona Elks donate $2,000 to Katie Cares

By Ashleigh Viveiros

Members of the Altona Elks headed to Morden-Winkler last week to pay a visit to Katie's Cottage.

Elks Sharon Makara, Candy Neustader, Lloyd Schroeder, Chris Klassen, and Guy Mullen stopped by the respite home, located a stone's throw from the Boundary Trails Health Centre, to present Ruth Reimer of Katie Cares with a sizeable donation.

"We donated $2,000 to Katie Cares for their little Beanie Babies because we want to do something for the kids that are going to the hospital," explained Mullen, noting that going to the hospital for any reason—whether it's an emergency or a simple blood test—can be scary for a kid, so getting a furry friend to hug can help make things a little easier.

Katie Cares distributes thousands of free Beanie Babies every year to child patients at BTHC, Altona Community Memorial Hospital, and the hospitals in Carman, Portage la Prairie, and La Salle. Winkler Dental Clinic also recently got involved with the program.

"It's a wonderful idea," Mullen said, noting this is the Elks' second donation to Katie Cares in recent years, but it won't be their last. "They are an amazing group ... from now on, we are going to be donating to Katie's Cares because it's what we do: [help] children. That's all we work with is children. So we would love to be working with Katie's Cares to help the children in the area."

Reimer says the $2,000 will go to purchase 1,000 Beanie Babies to be distributed at the Altona hospital.

"It doesn't matter where I go, somebody will come up to me and say, 'You know, our daughter, our son, our baby got one of these little things, little Beanies,'" she says. "It's just seems like such a small thing, but ... these furry little friends come into their lives and they wipe away a tear and a smile appears on their faces. It's beautiful to hear the stories."

The initiative is at the very heart of Katie Cares. It all started when Reimer's late daughter, Kaitlyn, gave comfort to a fellow patient in the hospital by giving them a teddy bear.

"That was her first project when she was in the hospital," Reimer shares. "She was able to give a little girl that was so badly beaten, she gave that gift to that child. And it has not been forgotten. This is something that is important to us and I never want to stop giving that to the kids."

The Altona Elks currently have a couple dozen members and they're always looking for more. The club has been in operation since 1960.

"With each member we have, we grow stronger and we get better ideas," Mullin says.

One of the ways the club raises funds for the programs and projects it supports is through a weekly Chase the Ace game at the Altona Hotel.

You can find and connect with the Altona Elks through Facebook or at altonaelks.wordpress.com.

Tractor Trek expected to reach $1M milestone for Eden

By Ashleigh Viveiros

Forty-nine vintage tractors hit the road Saturday in support of Eden Foundation and mental health programming.

The foundation's 16th annual Visit the Village Tractor Trek set out from Winkler that morning with participants parading through town in the first leg of a 46 km route that took them through Reinfeld, Blumengart Hutterite Colony, Gnadenthal, and Neuenberg.

"It was an extremely enjoyable day with lots of smiles and just a positive vibe, a positive attitude from all of the trekkers," said Jayme Giesbrecht, Eden Foundation director of development. "It was a great success in so many ways."

While the final tally of donations collected wasn't expected to be available until later this week, Giesbrecht is confident the event—which last year raised over $92,000—has hit a milestone.

"It's a significant year as this is the year that we surpass the $1 million mark for the event in its totality," she says, sharing that the funds go to support Eden's myriad of programs in the communities it serves across southern Manitoba. "It all goes towards housing, employment services, and counselling programming, as well as to [projects at] the mental health care centre.

"I'm just so grateful for everyone involved," she adds. "To see the community support as we started and ended in Winkler, to see people come out in the villages to watch the tractors go by, and for our local business sponsors to make sure that we have the overhead funding so that all of the donors' money can go directly towards the cause is so valuable and important. It's a long day, but it's so fulfilling."

The Tractor Trek got its start back in 2007 as a special event to mark Eden's 40th anniversary. That first year saw, fittingly, 40 tractors travel 40 kilometres and exceed the $40,000 fundraising goal by over $11,000.

To see the trek reach $1 million is amazing, notes event founder Armin Ens, who has been the lead tractor driver for years.

"The fact that we've reached this milestone signifies that this is a very important and significant cause," he says. "We live in an incredibly generous community, and we have a very gracious God who has allowed all of this to happen."

"We can all do our part"

Morden-Winkler leaders urge residents to be water conscious

By Lorne Stelmach

The region may now be two years removed from extreme drought, but Morden and Winkler leaders were recently reminding residents to continue to have water conservation in mind.

The cautions came in the midst of the season being a peak time in terms of water usage and with the City of Morden especially warning that its water treatment plant was being pressed to near capacity.

It's about helping ensure a sustainable future for water while the city continues to pursue short and long term options, stressed Nancy Penner, who chairs the drought committee for Morden city council.

"We can all do our part just to be more aware of how much water we are using," she said.

"I think we are above normal as far as the Canadian average per person per litre per day consumers of water, so I think that is something that we have to be aware of," Penner continued. "We're not at the low end of the scale, so I think we have room to be more water conscious with our consumption."

"We're not mandating to conserve but we're always asking everybody to conserve water," said Travis Duff, water services supervisor for the City of Winkler.

"Water usage goes up considerably, usually in mid-May and June ... so it's just a reminder to everybody that water consumption goes up in summer time and that water conservation is always a good idea."

The City of Winkler shares weekly "Water Wednesdays" posts on its Facebook page to keep residents up to date on water usage. Last week, for example, had consumption at 77 per cent of production capacity, which was rated as just barely down in the green or normal zone.

"I think the residents of Winkler are outstanding. Our water usage for the city is in the range of 130 to 140 litres per person per day, which is quite phenomenal when you look at the average water usage," Duff said, noting the Canadian average is 215 litres per person.

"By no means are we concerned that we don't have enough production or that we can't treat enough water or that we can't get enough water from Pembina Valley Water Co-op. All of those things are fine," he said. But they do want to keep residents aware of what's happening. "We work and communicate almost daily on what our plants are doing ... do we have any concerns or is it business as usual?"

In Morden, Penner recalled how the need for conservation became vital during the drought of 2021. She feels residents continue to be mindful of how much water they're using.

"Everybody stepped up and showed that we could do it ... there's lots of little things that we can all do."

The city had noted recently that the water plant was running at 43 litres per second, which was getting close to its maximum capacity of 45 litres per second.

If circumstances warranted, they could consider options like people only being allowed to water even or odd days, Penner said.

"We're not there yet," she stressed. "I'm not sure that we're even back to having that bowl in the sink every time you rinse something, but it's just always being aware of water conservation."

"Even with the Pembina Valley Water Co-op, I think they're at their peak water usage right now as well," she said. "So I think we always have to create that awareness."

Central Station receives 'Spruce Up' grant

By Ashleigh Viveiros

Central Station's outdoor seating area is getting a face-lift thanks to funding from Red River Mutual.

The insurance agency last week announced the Winkler community centre as one of 10 recipients of this year's Spruce Up Your Story funding, which totals over $150,000 for projects across Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Central Station received nearly $15,000 to transform the space by its front entrance into a more welcoming community gathering hub.

"We are super excited. We have plans to do a bit of a timber frame roof with some sails over it to create a kind of an awning to get some shade in the picnic area in the front of our building," explains executive director Bev Wiebe. "Our building is very industrial, so it will be nice to add some character into there."

"It'll add some life to it and create a community space people can use ... we're right on Main St., so we want it to look appealing and welcoming."

The grant will cover the full costs of the project, which is expected to get underway soon.

"We have two builders that are going to start working on it in the next couple of weeks," Wiebe says. "It sounds like hopefully it won't take them too long."

The Spruce Up Your Story campaign received a total of 317 submissions this year.

"We're thrilled to see the enthusiastic response this initiative is still getting in its fourth year. There were many worthwhile submissions and it was hard to pick just 10 recipients. We're excited to see the impact these projects will have in their communities," says Red River Mutual CEO Brenda Gibson. "We're committed to helping make a positive impact in the communities and neighbourhoods we do business in. Learning about our communities' needs and building connections with them is something we look forward to, and we're grateful to be a part of their stories."

Since 2020, the campaign has provided over $500,000 to support community projects in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

The submitted renovation or beautification projects are evaluated based on community use and significance, their commitment to sustainability, opportunities for volunteerism, and connections to a local insurance brokerage

Other winning Manitoba projects this year include those in Winnipeg, Forrest, Argyle, and Virden.

Help at home

Over the years, particularly when we approach municipal and provincial elections, the calls for dramatically increased spending on social infrastructure in Winnipeg get louder.

Honestly, who can blame people? The evidence of need for a massively expanded inventory of safe, accessible, affordable housing is obvious. There are clear signs that we need more shelter beds, addictions care, safe injection sites, transitional housing, and more throughout the city.

One fact that is often not talked about loudly enough is that a large number of people utilizing social infrastructure come from outside of Winnipeg. In fact, according to the Winnipeg Street Census 2022, more than 40 communities are represented amongst Winnipeg's homeless population, most from Manitoba, and a disproportionately large percentage are Indigenous (68.2 per cent).

"While cultural norms within Indigenous cultures include such supports as extended kin networks, widespread poverty and lack of adequate affordable housing mean that too often, families lack the resources to assist with the transition of family members from home communities to Winnipeg," the census noted. When it comes to Winnipeg's social infrastructure needs, we have a sort of chicken and egg scenario. Which came first? The social infrastructure or the need for social infrastructure? Of course, complex issues such as homelessness and social need cannot be boiled down to such simplistic questions, but you get the point. How many people utilizing the infrastructure have come to Winnipeg because they lacked supports in their home communities?

Often people move "to the city" because of the allure of urban density and opportunity. But how many people are leaving the support network of family, friends, and community for Winnipeg simply because they lack the social infrastructure supports locally and feel they have no other option?

In the Pembina Valley communities of Morden (where I live), Winkler, and the surrounding municipalities, there is a population of about 40,000 people and little in the way of transitional housing (Genesis House does have one three-bedroom unit for the victims of domestic violence). That means a youth aging out of care in the region or a woman leaving the shelter must move to a city like Winnipeg for support or, in the case of many women, potentially be forced back into an abusive circumstance.

I have had numerous conversations with community support workers, politicians, and others about the possibility of distributing social infrastructure throughout rural and northern Manitoba with varying levels of receptiveness.

Community support workers readily agree that if the infrastructure necessary existed locally in outside communities many people would remain near home rather than going to Winnipeg. With the added support of familiarity, family and friends, people have a higher likelihood of overcoming barriers they may be struggling with as well.

Still, there is hesitancy to talk about the possibility of distributing social infrastructure outside of Winnipeg, particularly amongst local politicians, for fear it would mean reduced and/or redirected funding. But isn't this the point?

And let's be honest: most rural communities and councils are not clamoring for provincial and federal assistance to grow and build social infrastructure. If certain people go to Winnipeg instead of remaining, our local leadership isn't exactly fighting

LOOKING FOR ANSWERS

This letter is about the state of health care in our area.

We created seven questions to help us understand what is happening in our local Altona Memorial Hospital and apparently throughout our provincial and federal health care system, and sent them to Southern Health, our MLA, our Minister of Health, and the Altona Memorial Hospital lead. We believed that having actual data would help us dialogue better with health care representatives and understand the situation better. We asked:

- "Regarding our Altona Hospital,
1. What is the full equivalent number of nurses and doctors currently at the hospital site?
 2. What is the full time equivalent of paramedics and ambulances that work out of our hospital in Altona?
 3. Is stretcher service still available for stabilized patients to free up ambulances?

4. What would the full equivalent doctors/nurses staffing need to be at in order for the community to notice a major improvement in services?

5. If a stretcher service is no longer available at our hospital, how could it be instituted?

6. What would be the ideal full equivalent of paramedics and ambulances needed to meet our communities' demands?

7. Any other factors I am missing besides sufficient support staff?"

At the time of this letter, we have received no response.

Hearing from hospital doctors, nurses, and support staff, we've learned that the responses they receive from their managers when voicing their concerns all have a common thread:

- "We appreciate you contacting us."
- "Thanks for taking the time to let us know of your concerns."
- "We are working on it."

Our impression is that constructive communication lines and collaborative problem-solving are broken and or nonexistent.

Staff venting is drastically reduced when staff feel and see their concerns being acknowledged by management and that they are included in finding more effective ways, including process updates with meaningful feedback from hospital staff.

Often a manager's strategy throughout this healthcare issue is listening to their staff concerns and doing nothing about it. Sadly that is when staff turns to venting among themselves, leading to a toxic workplace, and then to friends and community, creating a sinkhole where issues aren't raised through the proper lines of communication. Now you not only need to resolve the original issue but have to somehow rebuild a positive work environment.

By not constructively including staff in the decision making process, we are seeing highly trained staff leave the profession because of burnout and not being respected for their input.

If you get the impression that we are venting or frustrated, we are. However, we are more saddened by the manner in which the constructive input of our hospital floor staff is not being acted upon by management, or the lack of timely feedback to staff to confirm if changes are having the desired impact for staff and for individuals seeking help from our healthcare system.

Mary Ann & Art Wiebe,
Rosenfeld

to get them back.

If greater funding of rural and northern infrastructure reduces the strain and need in Winnipeg and allows people the choice of remaining close to family, friends, and community, shouldn't this at least be considered and pursued?

I think about this a lot because I run a non-profit in Winnipeg called The Jubilee Fund and while we have a provincial mandate to assist with poverty reduction initiatives, most of the work we have done has been within Winnipeg.

It's time for funding bodies to start seriously considering increasing (and in some instances starting) funding to social infrastructure in northern and rural Manitoba communities to allow people the dignity of choice – to remain in the communities they grew up in, close to family and friends, or to head to Winnipeg if they want.

Municipal Board overturns council's decision

By Lorne Stelmach

A local developer has won their appeal of an earlier Morden council decision that denied a rezoning for a proposed new condo development in the city.

The Manitoba Municipal Board heard the appeal in late April and last week released its decision that clears the way for the three, 16-unit, three-storey condos near the busiest intersection in Morden.

The proposal was initially rejected by city council, but K Block Developments appealed the decision to the provincial oversight body.

Morden Mayor Brandon Burley last week expressed dismay over a process that allows a provincial body to overrule a local council.

"We're being given notice that what we want doesn't matter," said Burley, who suggested this is an example of local authority being eroded and removed by the current provincial government.

"To just circumvent local government is a disappointment, and it's a reflection of the fact that they seem not to care about local voices at all," he said. "The municipal board exists solely to achieve whatever ends the province seems to want to have, and an unelected, undemocratic institution is allowed to bypass the local voices of government."

K Block owner and president Frank Klassen was appreciative of having the opportunity to have the municipal board take a closer look at the matter, but he especially emphasized "their desire to work with the City of Morden planning and council to come up with something that works for everyone.

"I realize that we can't satisfy everyone, and you face this all the time with developments. Multi-family isn't desired anywhere and yet, over and over, once the project is built, it helps build up the community," said Klassen, who reiterated it is "their desire to work with everyone and not against them."

The rezoning will change the properties at 20 Victoria Street and 227 First Street from residential two-family to residential multi-family to allow for the development of the three buildings that will have 48 units overall. They will be similar to the development at the corner of 15th Street and Highway 14 in Winkler.

K Block had maintained there was strong interest from Morden for this development and that the project will help address a real need for more housing options in the community.

They also countered that many of the issues raised by opponents can be mitigated in some way and that the increase in traffic would be more minimal than what had been suggested by opponents.

City representatives and opponents however had noted the Winkler development does not have single-family residential directly adjacent to it and also cited a number of other concerns, including the loss of privacy and the potential impact on their property values, while also just suggesting there are other better locations in the city for this kind of development.

As well, the impact on what is already heavy traffic in the area of First Street and Victoria Street/Highway 3 was a key concern cited by not only area residents who spoke in opposition to it but by council as well.

"It's kind of a difficult thing to swallow," said Burley. "The disappointment for us is that people who had no history or context in this community are now making decisions on our behalf ... we have the information and awareness of our community.

"It's something that communities all across Manitoba are facing right now in that it is a provincial government that seems to not want to respect other orders of government."

He added this is a concern that is shared by all municipalities and their provincial organization, the Association of Manitoba Municipalities.

"The AMM is working on this ... the increasing levels of disrespect that the province seems willing to show to local orders of government," Burley said. "Sometimes, you feel like you're in the way, and they have something they want to do and are going to get it done, and we're just a roadblock to their objectives.

"We want to work towards partnership with the province ... if they have objectives that we're not aware of ... then work with local municipalities. We want to know what those are," he added.

In the meantime, Burley said council will be sending a response to the municipal board as well as to the provincial government.

"We will express our distaste for the municipal board. We will be sure we submit this to the correct ministers."

Burley noted how people province-wide spoke up loud and clear against the plans to centralize control of the education system, and he hopes there could be a similar movement against the Manitoba Municipal Board system.

"Until there is that kind of outcry over the municipal board and the loss of local voice and local representation, nothing will change," he said. "If what they want is to put an administrator in every municipality in Manitoba and let them represent their wishes, they might as well do that because they'll pay that representation more than they support councils to make those choices.

"If they want to keep playing this way, it's hard to support that government. It's hard to have respect when respect isn't given," he concluded. "We need a provincial government that will respect local orders of government ... we need real partners and real partnerships."

Moving forward, Burley said they will be working and consulting with K Block Developments on this project as it proceeds.

"We will certainly do our best to do what we can to see the development happen as amenably and as well as possible."

MANITOBA CANADA'S HEART IS CALLING

Rosemary Siemens to perform in Austin July 30

By Voice staff

Rosemary Siemens is back in Manitoba this month to perform at the Manitoba Threshermen's Reunion and Stampede in Austin.

Rosemary & The Sweet Sound Revival take the stage at the Grandstand Rodeo Grounds on Sunday, July 30 at 11:30 a.m.

"Rosemary Siemens has performed around the world but she also has a strong Manitoba connection—she is originally from Plum Coulee," said Ed Heppner of The Mobile Stage Co., which is presenting the show. "One day I was wondering if Rosemary and her band might be available for the Thresherman's Reunion. I got in touch with them and before long the arrangements had been made.

"They'll actually be flying out from Italy to play this show, so I hope everyone is ready to welcome them back to Manitoba. I know I am."

Rosemary & The Sweet Sound Revival is a six-piece instrumental bluegrass/country group that won album of the year at the Global Music Awards a few years ago. Their Austin show will feature a mix of country, gospel, hymns, and inspirational classics.

Siemens has performed at New York's Carnegie Hall and is the only solo violinist to play in the Sistine Chapel in Vatican City.

"I've written songs about my experiences so that people will be inspired and connect to the stories. My goal is to touch, inspire and make people smile," says Siemens. "This show takes you on a journey from classical to bluegrass to gospel to down-home fiddle, to tear-jerking inspirational stories perfect for any age."

The concert will also feature as special guest Grammy nominated Nash-

Tickets to the show are available in Austin (Phil's Fine Foods and Norfolk Lumber) or online at <http://bit.ly/RosemarySiemens-July30>.

Adult tickets are $35 each while kids age six to 12 are $10 (both of which includes Sunday admission to the Manitoba Agricultural Museum grounds). Kids five and under are free.

The concert happens rain or shine. Rush seating starts at 11 a.m.

> WATER CONSERVATION, FROM PG. 5

The City of Morden recently offered some recommendations on how to conserve water at home and in your workplace:

- Fix leaks and drips. A single leaky faucet can waste up to 3,000 gallons of water per year.

- Installing water-efficient fixtures: low-flow shower heads, faucets and toilets can save thousands of gallons of water per year.

- Water your lawn and garden efficiently. Water early in the morning or late in the evening to reduce evaporation, and use a soaker hose or drip irrigation system to target plant roots.

- Consider using rain barrels to collect water for your garden. Rain barrels can be purchased at the Morden Civic Centre.

- Use water wisely indoors.

PHAC hosts 'On the Bias'

Fibre arts exhibition on now at Morden gallery

By Lorne Stelmach

This month's group exhibit at the Pembina Hills Gallery in Morden was open to different interpretations for the artists involved in the show.

Each artwork in this exhibit by the Fibre Art Network is a personal exploration of the theme On The Bias.

Bias can be negative or positive, conscious or subconscious, scientific or philosophical, but it is also a play on words which, for textile artists, has a special meaning. When fabric is cut on the bias, diagonally across the grain, it is more fluid and has greater flexibility and drapability.

Fibre Art Network member Janet Harper, who was key in spearheading the idea for this exhibit, said it was very interesting to see the variety of work and approaches taken by the artists who chose to take on the challenge.

"It's an interesting approach. Most of our exhibits are much more targeted at a particular technique or something," said Harper, who is based in Vancouver. "I'm always amazed by the variety that is developed within the sometimes very close parameters of the exhibit."

The Fibre Art Network is a co-operative of artists based in Western Canada first conceived in the spring of 1998, and the group is committed to promoting fibre as an art form and each other as artists.

Members come from across western Canada and the territories, so it is a long distance meeting of minds that spans artistic challenges as well as geographic ones. They also meet in community-based subgroups and for an annual conference where they connect and share as they stretch their comfort zone and take their art to a new level.

Membership includes emerging fibre artists, teachers, authors, judges, and award-winning textile artists. Many have shown their work nationally and internationally and some have received both national and international recognition.

The network mounts a new gallery exhibit each year that is open to all members and available to travel to venues across Canada for a period of three years.

The description for On The Bias notes that "as humans and artists, we are familiar with the concept of bias as it applies to society, politics or the environment and also to interactions with our family, friends and neighbours.

"Bias is generally thought of as negative – prejudice in favour of or against a thing, person, or group compared with another, usually in a way considered to be unfair. But we all have people, places or things we prefer – bias is part of the richness of life."

"What really hooked me in was I saw a book that was called On The Bias and it was about community complications and things like that ... and the title was on an angle on the front of the book," said Harper.

"For people who work with fabric, bias has a few meanings. One of them is the physical meaning ... either you go straight down or straight across or on the bias. Bias means going at 45 degrees," she explained. "Fabric is much more stretchy on the bias. It doesn't fray as much. There's a whole bunch of differences when you're using fabric on the bias.

"I was also thinking though about the bias we have in everyday life, either positive or negative bias ... so between all these things, I thought there was something we could build an exhibit around it."

Harper continues to feel blessed to be part of the network and feels fortunate to see where it has all come from and where it is going from here.

"We started as a much smaller group, just getting together to do things and inspire each other ... it grew to where we're not at 120 members or something like that.

"The purpose of the organization is really to keep us going creatively and to keep in touch with like minded people across western Canada," she said. "We share ideas quite a bit ... a lot of it is individually developed ... but there's always new ideas coming along for us."

Free provincial parks entry this week

By Voice staff

If you haven't ventured into Manitoba's provincial parks before, this is the week to go.

Entry to all provincial parks is free July 10-16.

"For the third year in a row, our government is providing week-long free provincial park access to coincide with Canada's Parks Day," said Natural Resources and Northern Development Minister Greg Nesbitt. "This initiative allows all Manitobans to enjoy our parks' extraordinary natural beauty, intriguing historical sites and diverse recreational activities."

Through to the end of the weekend, a vehicle permit will not be required to visit any of the province's 92 parks, though overnight camping fees remain in effect. Entrance fees are also still in effect for any national parks.

A calendar of free interpretive events and experiences including guided hikes, historical tours and campfire talks, is available at <https://gov.mb.ca/nrnd/parks/education-and-interpretation/event-listings.html>.

Several campgrounds have also organized special events to celebrate Canada's Parks Day on July 15. Visitors can check with the local campground office for details on any activities happening in the park.

Individuals who wish to camp in a provincial park can make a reservation through the Parks Reservation Service at www.manitobaparks.com or by calling 1-888-482-2267.

Cadenza music camp creates environment of fun, creativity

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Douglas Kuhl School of Music filled the halls of Winkler Elementary School with music last week.

Its Cadenza Summer Music Week brought together 84 budding musicians of all ages for five days of instruction and fun.

The week is filled with a little bit of everything, shares administrator Hannah Drudge.

"We've got chambers going on, orchestras, choir, musical theater, fiddle groups, cello ensembles," she says. "They get to experience so many different facets of music, which is really cool. We've had a lot going on, but it's been really fun."

In addition to rotating between various classes throughout the day, the students also headed over to the P.W. Enns Centennial Concert Hall for lunchtime concerts featuring advanced students and Cadenza's various professional musician instructors.

Learning an instrument can often be a solitary exercise, Drudge observes, so having the chance to get together and play and celebrate music together is a vital aspect of the Cadenza program.

"Playing by yourself is great, but playing with other people and seeing that there are other people who love music and there are teachers coming in who love music and are passionate excited about it—I think that's really, really cool for kids to see."

Pianist Everett Hopfner has been part of the camp's faculty for three summers now and the philosophy behind the week is what keeps him coming back.

"THEY GET TO EXPERIENCE SO MANY DIFFERENT FACETS OF MUSIC."

"It's not just that it's non-competitive, it's that there isn't actually an opportunity to be competitive," he says. "It's structured so much around exploration, around learning, around discovery and creativity. Some of the less helpful elements that exist in some parts of music teaching just don't have a home here.

"And to also have the chance to be with so many colleagues, and other music teachers who believe strongly ... that we're all here in series to the music," Hopfner adds. "It's really about how can we help the experience of learning music feel like playing in a sandbox?"

"The kinds of formal and informal learning that happen in this environment is just special and rare."

Strings, piano, and vocal students got the chance to learn from professional musicians and stretch their creativity in the Cadenza Summer Music Week activities at Winkler Elementary School.

The week got a big thumbs up from the students as well.

In between classes on Thursday, 11-year-old pianists Brielle Penner and Njiva Museka shared their thoughts on the program.

It was Penner's second year taking part, and Museka's first.

Museka said she'd enjoyed "everything" so far.

"The Music Lab is really fun because we get to play with balloons and make music from them," she said of the class designed to engage the students' creativity.

For Penner, it's the orchestra lessons she loves most.

Both encourage musically-inclined kids to give the camp a try next summer.

"I'd tell them it's really fun and that you get to meet lots of new friends and learn more about music," Museka said.

Wooden Gate Cider teams up with local charitable projects

By Lorne Stelmach

A charity initiative is not only good for business for a Pilot Mound company, but also giving back to communities across southern Manitoba.

Wooden Gate Cider offers the opportunity for individuals or organizations to collect and bring unused apples and other fruits to the company to earn money for charitable causes.

The idea has taken hold in the last few years with a number of organizations and communities getting involved, and it is very much a win-win situation for everyone.

"We're trying to get everywhere and anywhere in province where there's people willing to pick apples ... even organizations that are willing to host the drive to have people drop off apples and have us pick them up," said Wooden Gate's Clint Cavers.

The idea grew from when they first started making cider just for themselves about 20 years ago.

"We did it because there was an abundance of fruit that was just going to waste everywhere," Cavers said. "So when we decided to commercialize it ... we started selling four years ago ... we got asked actually by one of the community groups here in Pilot Mound whether or not they could pick apples for us.

"We thought it kind of fits with what we wanted to do. It was a way that we could gather more apples that we didn't have time to gather, and it was a way to give back to the community in the form of cash for community organizations that were struggling to fundraise.

"So we've just continued it every year, offering it kind of across the province. There's different organizations in different communities," Cavers explained. "It's enabled us to collect more apples and apples that would go to waste and make connections in communities that we wouldn't have had otherwise and get some funds into community organizations at the same time."

Things were hampered a bit during COVID because people couldn't gather in groups, but Cavers said he has been encouraged by the response overall in recent years.

"We had a couple groups in Carman a couple years ago ... and we've got groups in Pilot Mound, Crystal City. We had a group in Boissevain," he noted.

Joining the list this year is the Genesis House shelter for the victims of domestic violence in Winkler.

"What struck me about it was the creativity behind the giving," noted executive director Ang Braun. "What a cool way of donating because it can engage all of the community, and it can ensure that things don't just go to waste. How awesome.

"There is simply no downside to this idea," she added. "As the summer carries on and people have extra, if they're willing to take it over there, it can turn into something good ... and people can identify that they saw this through Genesis House and ask that the money comes to us then."

Cavers noted he likes the variety of organizations and communities that are catching on to this idea.

"The skating club here in Pilot Mound over the last couple years has raised between $5,000 and $6,000 ... that's a group of youngsters and their parents going out and picking apples.

Got extra apples? Wooden Gate Cider will take them off your hands and donate funds to local charities.

"We've had people drop off apples for organizations and wanting us to pay organizations that haven't even really been a part of it."

Anyone interested in learning more can head online to louisemb.com/m/wooden-gate-cider for details.

"We would like more people to sign up," Cavers said. "If it's successful enough, we're probably going to set up collection days for those organizations in their towns."

CFDC balancing long and short-term goals

By Lorne Stelmach

It's a balancing act for the Canadian Fossil Discovery Centre as it works towards its long-term goal of a new building while also focusing on its continued growth in the short term.

Board president Allison Halstead reflected on that challenge following the centre's recent annual meeting.

"I don't believe that we're stepping out and going forward with stars in our eyes," she said. "We know that it's going to be a lot of hard work yet, but we're certainly feeling very optimistic.

"I think the board's major task is we are going to have to reinvigorate the community ... it's not the first time that the community has heard there's going to be a new building, but this time it actually does have traction and the possibility of it becoming a reality."

Halstead touched on a number of highlights from the past year for the Canadian Fossil Discovery Centre, ranging from the new shark exhibit to lab renovations and improvements to the gift shop.

The laboratory renos cost about $12,000 but was covered with government funding as well as a contribution from Decor Cabinets.

The improvements to the gift shop provided more space for an increased variety of items, and it brought an increase in sales and profitability.

"We also had our first gala after being shutdown during COVID with Dr. Michael Caldwell [as the third recipient of the Elizabeth 'Betsy' Nicholls Award for Outstanding Contributions to Palaeontology]," Halstead noted. "That was absolutely amazing with his wonderful presentation. It was incredibly insightful and educational for all of us."

Halstead also highlighted the CFDC qualifying for a Mathematics of Information Technology and Complex Systems grant, which provides $106,000 in funding over four years to support a palaeontology student working towards his or her doctorate degree.

"We've hired someone from Portugal who I think will arrive in August ... so he's going to be working and studying at university for his doctorate for the school year and then be out here for the four months and work in the field at the CFDC.

"It is an incredible opportunity for us to have someone working on their doctorate here," Halstead said. "We get the benefit of their research.

"We also had a student from University of Manitoba last fall who attended the palaeontological annual meeting and did a research presentation on our specimen we call Betsy," she added. "They're studying it quite intensely because it might be a new spe-

Local police, firefighters preparing for World Games

By Lorne Stelmach

The chance to take part in the largest sporting event ever hosted in Manitoba was too good to pass up for some local emergency personnel.

The 2023 World Police and Fire Games takes place from July 28 to August 6 in Winnipeg, and some members of departments from Morden, Winkler, and Altona will be participating in it.

"It's a once in a lifetime experience, so I'm looking forward to it, and hopefully I can bring my A game," said Rick Schroeder, a Winkler firefighter who be competing in golf.

"It's all over the world ... so the fact that it is in Winnipeg and close to home, I figured I should give it a shot," said Altona firefighter Adam Skelton, who will be involved in three events including the mountain bike race as well as two related to firefighting: a stair race in full gear and the ultimate firefighter competition.

Held biennially, the World Police and Fire Games is an Olympic-style competition with more than 8,500 athletes representing law enforcement, firefighters and police officers from more than 50 countries across the world.

A few members from the Winkler Police Service will be going, including Phil Letkeman in hockey and Megan Goertzen in jiu-jitsu.

"This is the first time that I'm aware of that it's been this close to home in Winnipeg," noted Chief Ryan Hunt. "It's a fantastic opportunity for police officers and firefighters to get together and be involved with other police and firefighters from all over the world ... I hope to be able to get in and take in some of the events."

The Morden Police Service will be sending a curling team featuring special constables Pam Goertzen and Morgan Reimer, Sgt. Scott Edwards, and a fourth member from elsewhere in the region. Cst Jon Goertzen is also entered in the jiu-jitsu event.

"It's a huge event, so to have members representing our services is pretty special," noted Chief Brad Neduzak.

"We're anxious to see how everybody makes out," he said, adding the fellowship is a huge part of it. "A lot of them are looking forward to that ... meeting people from all over the country and all over the world. It will be interesting to connect and hopefully make some friendships that they could maybe keep up."

Representing the Altona Police Service, meanwhile, will be Cpl. Mark Legal and Cst. Dustin Giesbrecht in the individual angling and team angling events while Cst. Brendan Funk will be part of the opening ceremonies

For Skelton, who has been with the Altona fire department as a full-time member for three years, the ultimate firefighter competition especially is a challenge he is looking forward to tackling.

It includes four events testing such things as their strength and endurance such as rolling hose and carrying it a certain distance and hoisting a high-rise pack including 100 ft. of one and a half inch hose up five stories.

"There's stuff that applies to what we do in the line of duty and there's stuff that doesn't," said Skelton. "I'm excited for the experience. I'm looking forward to the challenge ... it's definitely been a challenge with the training I've been trying to do for it."

"It's not every often you can meet people from all over the world ... people who have the same loves and passions as you do."

"I thought it would be a pretty cool thing," agreed Schroeder, who has been with the Winkler fire department for 18 years. "At the time when I heard about it, I thought would be just a spectators event, but going into a little research, I found out we were eligible to play.

"It's pretty exciting. I look forward to playing some golf on three really nice courses in Winnipeg and the chance to meet firefighters, emergency personnel, law enforcement people ... people on likeminded career paths from all different countries."

As part of his preparation, Schroeder has spent extra time out on the golf course, including with Winkler club pro Colton Harder.

"He's been really helping me with my game," said Schroeder. "I've been playing a lot of golf."

"There's a wide variety of sports in these Games, so it should be interesting," he added. "I hope I get a chance to watch some of it as well."

cies and the fossil even had stomach contents present ... that's absolutely remarkable."

Finally, Halstead noted the improvements made at the centre's 110 acre property, including the construction of a new field station, which became possible with significant support from the federal government.

"It enabled us to plan and build the field station. That's such a gift ... so the students that are out there and people who are working have a place to get in out of the heat, to sit down ... also now we have many people signing up to do dig tours again."

Meanwhile, the centre remained stable financially in 2022 with a deficit of $17,138 for the year.

It has continued to benefit from various provincial and federal grants, with a significant overall increase to $517,551 in 2022 from $276,910 in 2021 and $150,993 in 2020.

The centre had a busier year with 11,819 paid visitors in 2022—46 per cent of which were adults and 37 per cent students—with the busiest month being July and August.

Every project and initiative has been planned to increase the visitation, programming, and consequently the longer term sustainability of the centre, and Halstead gave a lot of credit for that to executive director Adolfo Cueta.

"In that regard, we are incredibly lucky because his experience before was on building and sustaining museums ... he does know what needs to happen," she said. "He's very diligent at ensuring that we're not over-extending ourselves, making sure that we've tracked every grant lead."

"All of these things that we're doing are good steps forward for us," said Halstead.

"We need to do some work in the community, and we also need to boost the membership. I think people don't understand that it's important that people become members of not just museums but the art gallery and arts and cultural institutions of our communities," she added.

"People need to become members because then you become more involved; you have a say in what's going on," Halstead concluded. "We forget that the cultural things like art galleries and museums and libraries are vital to our health and survival as a community, yet we kind of take them for granted and forget that they need support."

"WE NEED TO DO SOME WORK IN THE COMMUNITY, AND WE ALSO NEED TO BOOST THE MEMBERSHIP."

Berry season well underway

By Lorne Stelmach

It's berry season again, and there are a number of growers in the region offering both pre-pick and u-pick options as well as selling at the local farmers markets.

A new addition to the range of producers in the Pembina Valley this year is Berry Shack Farm, which was started up by Trent and Melany Krahn.

They planted their first strawberry plants last May and were excited to start selling this year.

"We had the opportunity here, so we just decided to go for it, and we thought it would work well with our schedules," said Krahn, who teaches the electrical vocational program at Northlands Parkway Collegiate.

"I've just always been interested in agriculture and had the opportunity to start one. We had a property close to Winkler that we felt would do well with strawberries."

Krahn noted he has heard that growing conditions this season have varied widely from one area to the next.

"On our farm, we're doing well. The heat in May was a bit of a challenge, but the berries pulled through, and we're doing okay," he said.

"I think lots of farms have been challenged," he said. "The heat here has sped up the ripening, and so we don't then have as much time to get the crop off."

And he noted as well that it has been a learning process for them.

"We are still learning. There's a lot that we need to learn yet ... it's things like learning how to manage people to pick, people to sort and teaching those skills and learning about strawberry plants.

"You have to seek out the resources and build your network," Krahn added. "A lot of strawberry growers have helped me out along the way here ... just having that network of people that you can call on for advice has really helped us. And the Prairie Fruit Growers Association has been really helpful with advice and in setting up new growers for success."

A representative of the Prairie Fruit Growers Association noted last week that the hot spring weather had brought on a slightly earlier season for picking berries than in the past couple years.

Some berry farms offering haskap and strawberries were open a bit earlier, and they suggested people could expect saskatoon berries at the beginning of July at many farms, with raspberries and sour cherries not far behind.

The Prairie Fruit Growers Association has a website set up with all the member berry farms in Manitoba listed. Head to pfga.com for an up-to-date status of all types of fruit.

The association urges customers to double check with farms to make sure they are open for picking. Local weather events or large volumes of customers can sometimes result in a farm having to change its plans and close last-minute.

"The best time to pick berries is in the morning or in the evening when the berries are cooler," suggested Philip Ronald, a haskap and saskatoon grower and president of the association. "Try to put your picked

Mud Hens fall to Cardinals

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Morden Mud Hens found themselves on the wrong side of a home game against the Carman Cardinals Friday night.

Carman took it 5-0.

The Mud Hens had better luck on the road against the Altona Bisons a few nights earlier, winning that one 9-1.

In other Border League Baseball action last week, the Winkler Whips beat Carman 7-1 and Cartwright 9-4 while the Bisons fell to Baldur 6-2.

With that, Winkler is in first place in the East Division standings with a record of 7-2-2. Not far behind at 7-3-1 is Morden in second place. Altona (5-4) and Carman (3-8-1) are in third and fourth.

In the West Division, Pilot Mound leads the way at 7-4 followed by the Cartwright Twins (5-4), Baldur Regals (4-7), and Clearwater (3-9).

Coming up, the final week of regular season action sees Winkler host the Bisons Tuesday night and then Baldur on Friday, Morden host Altona Wednesday and then Cartwright Friday, and the Bisons host Clearwater Friday. Sunday is the league's all-star game in Cartwright.

MJBL quarter-final playoffs begin this week

By Lorne Stelmach

The playoffs got underway this week in the Manitoba Junior Baseball League with the Pembina Valley Orioles and Altona Bisons both in the roles of underdogs.

The Bisons finished seventh in the regular season and were taking on the second-place St. James A's, while the Orioles were in the cellar in eighth place and were facing first-place Elmwood Giants.

Both best-of-three series had been scheduled to get underway with game one Wednesday followed by game two Thursday and game three Friday, if necessary. Altona and Pembina Valley were both 1-2 against St. James and Elmwood in the regular season.

The last week of the regular season began with the Orioles ending an eight game losing streak by edging the St. Boniface Legionaires 5-3 Wednesday. Johnny Martens pitched a complete game, scattering five hits.

Things didn't go nearly as well then on the weekend as Pembina Valley dropped a 12-0 decision to the Carillon Sultans Friday and then fell 8-0 Sunday to St. Boniface.

The Bisons meanwhile could only manage four hits last Wednesday in falling 6-2 to Elmwood.

They ended the season Friday with a bases loaded single in the bottom of the eighth inning, providing the winning margin for a 6-5 win over the Interlake Blue Jays.

The other opening round playoff series pit Carillon against the Winnipeg South Wolves and Interlake against St. Boniface.

Rocking Barrel Charity Race raised over $30,000

By Ty Dilello

On June 16-17, the Rocking W Rick Wiebe Memorial Charity Barrel Race and Open 4D Barrel Race was held in Carman at the Dufferin Agricultural Society Fairgrounds.

The 2023 Charity Race raised a total of $30,700 for South Central Cancer Resource, which now brings the four-year Race total to $90,709.20 in total funds raised to date.

Dusty van der Steen has been producing barrel racing events for the past 15 years. He ran a long-standing and successful barrel series for ten years near Winkler/Morden, and it ended due to the pandemic.

"When the Denim and Dust took off during the pandemic years, I decided to step back from the Series and put more focus on the Charity Race event," said Dusty van der Steen, CEO of Rocking W Barrel Racing Productions. "We made it a weekend event with other opportunities to compete, such as the Dash for the Cash Slot Race, which paid out just over $26,000 this year."

The Rick Wiebe Memorial is in memory of van der Steen's dad, who died from cancer in 2020. Supporting the South Central Cancer Resource through this initiative helps support cancer patients and their families through their cancer journeys.

There were competitors on the weekend that turned out from all over Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and northwestern Ontario.

There were Open Entries in the Charity Race, 30 Youth and 13 Pee Wee entries. Over $12,000 in prize money was awarded for the Charity Race, and over $20,000 in prize value for the Charity Race.

The Dash for the Cash Slot Race paid out $26,275 in prize money. And over $10,000 in prize money was paid out in the additional races and side pots Natalie Elias of Reinfeld raised $3,125.

(futures and derby categories for young horses, Manitoba bred horses, average between Friday night and Saturday Charity race).

"We had wonderful, cooperative weather for the weekend, as everyone enjoyed their stay in Carman at the Dufferin Agricultural Society Fairgrounds. The event ran very smoothly with next to no hiccups," said van der Steen. "I am just so thankful for the community support and all of the competitors for raising $30,700 for South Central Cancer Resource. It's our highest fundraiser to date."

Storm 1, meanwhile, is struggling a bit in Premier Division. Sunday's loss puts them in seventh place with a 2-6 record.

The two teams host another pair of home games at the 15th St. field this Sunday. Storm 2 plays Punjab FC at 4:30 p.m. while Storm 1 plays Sporting Club Mosaic at 6:30 p.m.

Storm 2 also has a road game in Winnipeg against Dunvegan Castle Wednesday night.

Dusty van der Steen presented a $30,700 cheque in support of South Central Cancer Resource. The funds were raised at this year's Rocking W Rick Wiebe Memorial Charity Barrel Race and Open 4D Barrel Race event.

Storm teams suffer losses

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Winkler Storm teams both suffered losses in their home games Sunday evening

Storm 1 fell to Luso Canadian CCS 2-0 while Storm 2 was narrowly defeated 3-2 by the Richmond Kings. Mosi William scored both of Winkler's goals that game.

The Storm 2 have a 3-2 record for the summer thus far, which has them in fifth place out of 10 teams in the Manitoba Major Soccer League's 3rd Divi-

IN MEMORIAM

Ray Plett

August 13 1952 - July 16 2011

In Loving Memory
 Words cannot describe the words I say today...
 The tears I cry tomorrow...
 The ache I feel in my heart...
 The loneliness and sorrow...
 The longing for a hug...
 The searching for your touch...
 The darkness that I feel...
 All of this is just too much...
 The need for my best friend...
 The stories I want to share...
 The encouragement I crave...
 The gifts you used to bare...
 The ways of your teasing...
 The laughter I no longer hear...
 The fishing partner I so miss...
 The knowing you're gone is so surreal...
 So...I begin to remember not just that you died...
 But that you lived...
 And that your life gave me memories too beautiful to forget...
 I'll never not remember you!

OBITUARY

Susanna (Susie) Thiessen 1927 – 2023

Susie passed away shortly after midnight on Wednesday July 5, 2023. She had reached the age of 95 years, 11 months. Her mother taught her the prayer "Lieber Heiland mach mich from daz ich in den Himmel komm."

Susie was born on August 9, 1927 in Chortitz, the 10th child of John and Maria Thiessen, they named her Susanna. She started school in Chortitz when she was six years old and completed grade 10. She knew no English when she started school but she learned to speak and read English in a very short time. She loved to read and has read hundreds of books over the years. This was her entertainment as she did not have, or care for a television although sometimes she liked to watch Jeopardy with Annie. The teacher told her father that she was the smartest student in his class. In school, they had half an hour of religion every day. The teacher told them Bible stories and they had catechism once a week. Once Susie got a strapping because she had not memorized her catechism. She was baptized in the Old Colony Church by Bishop Jacob Froese upon the confession of her faith in Jesus Christ. She was a faithful and loyal member of the church. When she got older, she stopped attending because she became very hard of hearing and couldn't understand what was being said. She received visits from the ministers and deacons and they had communion with her. She read her Bible regularly. Susie, her sister, Agnes and brother, John lived with their parents on the farm in the village of Chortitz. They all worked together to run the small dairy and grain farm. Susie loved gardening so could most often be found tending vegetables in the big garden and of course her lovely flower gardens. Susie loved flowers and had rows of hollyhocks, morning glories, gladiolas, and four o'clocks would line the driveway. Some of her nieces say they must have gotten their love of gardening from her. Susie loved her nieces and nephews and she liked to spoil them. The children that went to school in Chortitz would often have lunch at the house and another favourite was faspas on Sunday afternoons. They also enjoyed playing in a large sandbox and she didn't mind when they got a little dirty. Susie loved family gatherings and never missed one. She also wanted to ensure that her nieces and nephews would inherit something one day. In 1991 Susie, John and Agnes retired to Winkler. After John passed away, Susie and Agnes moved into a brand-new condo at Oakview Terrace. Here she made many friends and loved visiting and playing games with her neighbours. After Agnes passed away her sister, Anne moved to a condo at Oakview Terrace and for the last three years Anne spent the night with her so could continue to live at home. Susie also loved to travel and went on numerous bus trips to the Maritimes, New Orleans and California to name a few. She also kept busy by volunteering at the MCC store for a number of years. She embroidered many school bags and at age 95 she was still embroidering quilt squares.

Susie was very sick in December 2019 and was placed in assisted living and paneled for Salem. With her stubborn nature and the Lord's help Susie found a way to get better and move back to Oakview Terrace in May 2020 and when Salem called, she was able to decline the available room. As a family we are very thankful for the service of Kathy Harder who was employed to provide care for Susie. Thanks to Kathy's compassionate care Susie was able to return home after being placed in assisted living and she lived on her own for the past three years. It was a family effort ensuring her needs were met with John Dyck and Anna Wieler running many errands for her. You knew she was loved as nieces and nephews made a point of stopping by for a visit whenever they could. Susie was hospitalized on June 1st and decided that she was ready to go to her everlasting home. We are thankful for the excellent care provided by the staff at Boundary Trails Health Centre over the past five weeks. May God Bless you all!

Susie was predeceased by her parents, 10 siblings and is survived by her siblings, Peter, Anne and Betty.

We would like to thank Bishop John Wiebe, the song leaders, the ladies for serving the lunch and Wiebe Funeral Home.

Funeral service was held at 3:00 p.m. on Sunday July 9, 2023 at the Chortitz Old Colony Mennonite Church with interment at the Church Cemetery.

OBITUARY

Patricia Humeniuk (nee Borkowski) June 07, 1925 - July 05, 2023

It is with very saddened hearts that we announce the passing of Patricia Humeniuk on Wednesday, July 05, 2023 at the age of 98, with her family by her side.

Patricia was predeceased by her loving husband, Waldy, their son, Ivan (Carolyn) Humeniuk and their daughter, Jo-Ann (Mike) Gogal.

Left to survive Patricia are her daughter, Rosemarie (Garry) Haggerty, her three grandchildren, Patrick (Tanis) Haggerty, Jodi (Andrew) Terhoch and Landon (Lucia) Gogal. Patricia also leaves behind four great-grandchildren: Teagan, Kiera, Sienna and Easton.

Patricia was born in Poland in 1925 and was the eldest of three girls. Her family immigrated to the Ethelbert area when she was 10 years old. She met Waldy while he was teaching school in the Dauphin area and they were married in 1945. In the early years as a family they moved to several communities throughout Manitoba for Waldy's teaching career. During this period, Patricia's focus was on raising their three children. In 1965, the family moved to Swan River where they spent the next 20 years. Patricia was able to finally settle down and become part of the community. While her children and the church remained her focus, it was here that she began a career in retail. When Waldy retired in 1985, they moved to Morden to be closer to family, especially the grandchildren. They enjoyed several winters at their second home in Texas. They became active members of the St. John Roman Catholic Church in Morden where they attended mass daily. Patricia initiated the idea of making perogies to raise money to help pay for a new church, a fundraising effort that the parishioners still continue. The two most important things in Patricia's life always remained God and family. She was a much talked about cook and baker (especially her apple pies, donuts and perogies) and she had the best garden in the neighbourhood. She maintained a warm and welcoming home with her kitchen as the gathering place for family and friends. She took pride in cooking the traditional Ukrainian Christmas and Easter dishes with recipes she taught to her family. Her beautiful sweaters, afghans and slippers will always keep her loved ones warm. Patricia was a very thoughtful and caring person. She will be sadly missed and thought of fondly by all those who knew her.

The family thanks Patricia's special angels at Tabor Home—Joy, Halyna, May and Lea. Also a thank you to her faithful friends Alice and Judy.

Funeral Mass was celebrated on Monday, July 10, 2023 in the St. John Roman Catholic Church in Morden. Interment followed at Chapel Cemetery.

Eden's Community Friends Program is looking for volunteers

By Ashleigh Viveiros

A program that has been building bridges in the community for nearly 50 years is looking for volunteers.

Eden Health Care Services' Community Friends Program is hoping to re-grow its volunteer roster now that the pandemic is behind us.

The upheaval of the past few years saw them lose a number of volunteers, but the need is as great as it ever was, shares Irma Klassen, Eden's coordinator of volunteers.

"The purpose of this program is to assist staff in helping clients of Eden programs cope with specific areas of socialization and/or adjustment to community living through a one-on-one relationship between a volunteer and an individual coping with mental health issues," she explains.

"These are people living in the community," Klassen says. "So a request will come from one of our community services workers at Pathways [which runs Eden's community-based mental health programs] or the housing program."

An Eden staff supervisor works with the client and the volunteer to come up with a game plan for what the client hopes to get out of the relationship.

"It really begins with establishing a friendship," Klassen says. "And then the staff supervisor will identify specific things this person maybe needs some help with, like navigating shopping or being introduced to the library. Sometimes it's just simply going out for coffee or getting together to do a puzzle, going to a hockey game.

"Through sharing these activities, clients receive much-needed support and encouragement to regain self-confidence and self-worth," she adds, noting volunteers serve as role models of someone living independently and coping well in life. "By connecting with a friend, opportunity is given for the client to return to a more fulfilling, normalized life that may result in building better relationships with others."

How often participants in the program meet is up to them.

"It really is something that depends on the client and the volunteer," Klassen says, noting the pair might get together once or twice a week or a few times a month—whatever works best for their respective schedules.

The program asks for a three to six-month time commitment from volunteers, though many successful matches have run for years. In other cases, a volunteer may be with a client for a time and then move on to another once the relationship has run its course.

Alvina Reimer has been involved with the program for 14 years. She began volunteering after retiring from her clerical job at Eden.

"I've had the same Community Friend for all these years," she says, noting in the early years they would go out together for coffee and walks regularly. These days Reimer more often visits her friend in her home.

"It's a connection. It breaks up her day or her week," Reimer says, noting she gets a lot out of the relationship as well just "knowing you've made a difference for somebody."

It gives you a different perspective on the impact mental illness can have on a person, she observes.

"That person that used to be well, that person is still there. It's just she's got an illness and sometimes you have to look for who is the person that's inside."

Fallon Tanguay was a Community Friends volunteer for four years pre-COVID and is hoping to get back into it again in the near future.

"The thing that I really liked about this particular volunteer opportunity was just the fact that you get to meet with one person individually one-on-one and really build a relationship, a deeper connection with person," she says, noting mental health is something she's always had an interest in. Tanguay also works at Eden Health Care Services.

"I think a huge part of mental health is getting out there and connecting," she says. "When we're struggling with our mental health, that's one of the hardest things to do, but it's one of the best things we can do.

"I think it was mutually beneficial in that way: I was getting out and doing stuff with her and getting involved in our community, and then she was also able to get out into the community and have someone to chat with."

To learn more about the Community Friends Program, contact Klassen at 204-325-4525 ex. 3253 or via email to iklassen@edenhealthcare.ca.

If this program doesn't suit you, Klassen notes they have many other ways of volunteering at Eden, including chapel accompanist, chapel leaders, volunteer drivers, the therapy dog program, providing entertainment or presentations for patients, and assisting with other activities at Eden.

Locals victorious at Junior Trap Provincials

By Ty Dilello

The Pembina Triangle Trap Club hosted the Manitoba Provincial Junior Trap Shooting Championship on June 25.

Thirty-seven shooters ranging in age from 12-18 descended on the Roland area club. Good conditions prevailed on the day with a little wind to make the targets dance.

"Things ran very smoothly other than a little wind which made the targets tougher, but everything went very well," said the club's Tyler Brown. "With the provincials being over now, we will continue to be open Thursdays at 7 p.m. and Sundays at 1 p.m. We always welcome new shooters, even if they have never touched a firearm before."

Kelsey Gloor of Brandon won the girls' division with an 85 out of 100, Nic Neufeld of Morden won the boy's title by shooting a 93 out of 100, Jill Goff from Elm Creek School who won the girl's novice trophy, and Karissa Giesbrecht of Miami won the girl's open trophy.

Goff, who is going into Gr. 10, has only been trap shooting for six months.

"I would not have been able to do it without all the amazing coaches at Pembina Triangle Trap Club and all the fantastic people in the sport who have helped me along the way," she said. "I got involved in this amazing sport through the Manitoba High School Rodeo Association ... and it is quickly becoming one of my favourites."

"I felt as though all my hard work and practice over the past few months has paid off even though it just started to come together in the past weeks," said Goff. "As for future events, I am hoping to attend the High School Rodeo Association Canadian Finals and am considering attending the Manitoba Trapshooting Association Provincial Championships in Brandon."

Giesbrecht, who is also going into Gr. 10, was shooting in competition for just the second time. She did the event because she wanted to learn how to shoot without a mount to rest her gun on.

"I loved the last event because it happened right where I practice," she said. "When I was called up to collect my trophy, I felt so happy because I knew that all my family would be so proud and that for me is the most rewarding thing about winning."

Glioblastoma Awareness Day

Join Us on July 19

On the fifth annual Glioblastoma Awareness Day, July 19, 2023, we shine a light on glioblastoma (GBM), the most common, complex, treatment-resistant, and deadliest type of brain cancer. National Brain Tumor Society spearheaded this annual event in 2019 to support survivors and their loved ones, to remember those who are no longer with us, and to honor leaders working toward a cure and better quality of life for those living with this devastating disease.

The incidence of glioblastoma (GB), also known as glioblastoma multiforme, is 4 per 100,000 people in Canada according to the Brain Tumour Registry of Canada*. GB accounts for 12-15% of all intracranial tumours and 50-60% of astrocytic tumours. GBMs increase in frequency with age and affect more men than women.

GBs may manifest at any age, but mostly affect adults with a peak incidence between 45 and 75 years of age. Only 3% of childhood brain tumours are glioblastomas.

Tumour Characteristics

- GB is the most common and most aggressive malignant primary brain tumour. These tumours contain various cell types, the most common being astrocytes.

- Most of these tumours occur in the cerebral hemispheres but can develop less commonly in other parts of the brain such as the cerebellum, brainstem or spinal cord. The cells of these tumours grow quickly, are not well defined, and can spread throughout the brain.

- Can develop directly or evolve from a lower grade glioma (secondary GB).

- Less common in children.

Common symptoms include, but are not necessarily limited to:

- Headache: The most common symptom, it's caused by an increased pressure in the brain

- Weakness in the arms or legs

- Decreased sensation

- Nausea and/or vomiting

- Unsteadiness

- Seizure

- Progressive memory decline

- Personality deficit

- Decreased level of consciousness

The kind of symptoms produced depends highly on the location of the tumour, more so than on its pathological properties. The tumour can start producing symptoms quickly, but occasionally is an asymptomatic condition until it reaches a larger size.

Treatment/Standard of Care

It is very difficult to treat glioblastoma due to several factors:

- The tumour cells are very resistant to conventional therapies

- The brain is susceptible to damage due to conventional therapy

- The brain has a very limited capacity to repair itself

- Many drugs cannot cross the blood-brain barrier to act on the tumour.

Surgery

The first treatment step is surgery to remove as much tumour as possible. Surgery is almost always followed by radiation. Glioblastoma's capacity to extensively invade and infiltrate normal surrounding brain tissue makes complete resection impossible. The goal of surgery is to de-bulk — a surgical procedure with the goal of decreasing the mass effect of a tumour by removing dead tissue or a portion of the tumour. However, improvements in neuroimaging have helped make better distinctions between tumour types and between tumour and normal tissue.

Radiation

After surgery, radiation therapy is used to treat any residual visible tumour on imaging and any microscopic tumour cells in the surrounding region in an attempt to prevent recurrence.

Chemotherapy

Chemotherapy is often given at the same time as radiation, and often given alone after the combination of chemotherapy and radiotherapy is completed. In children, chemotherapy may be used to delay the need for radiotherapy.
